WILTSHIRE.

WILTSHIRE is a south-western inland shire to the south of the Thames, and north of the shires on the shore of the English Channel: it is bounded on the north-west by Gloucestershire, on the north-east by Berkshire, on the east by Hampshire, on the south by Hampshire and Dorsetshire, and on the west by Somersetshire: its shape is that of a long square, with a round head to the north: it lies between 50°55′ and 51° 42° north latitude, and 1° 30° and 2° 22′ west longitude, and its area is 1,350 square miles, or 850,303 acres. The greatest length from north to south is 54 miles, and the greatest breadth from east to west is 37 miles. The population at various periods has been as follows:—1801, 183,820; 1811, 191,853; 1821, 219,574; 1831, 237,244; 1841, 256,290; 1851, 254,221; 1868, 249,311; 1871, 257,177 (makes 126,628, females 130,349). The climate on the downs is healthy, but the air is cold and sharp: in the north-west it is milder. North-East Wilts is drained by the feeders of the Thames, North-West Wilts by those of the Severn, and South Wilts by the heads of the Salisbury Avon. The shire is cut by a line of downs across the middle, to the south of which is Salisbury Plain: in the south another line of downs rons right acrose. The great cluster of Marlborough Downs fills the north-east to the south of Swindon.

Downs fills the north-east to the south of Swindon.

In the north lise the Thames head, Flagham brook, and will brook, joining the Churn, or true Thames, near wicklade: it then flows along the north border of Wilts, king the Key, or Ray, and the Cole. The Key, which is mill-stream about 16 miles long, rises in the hills near roughton, passes near Swindon, and joins the Churn near teklade; the Cole, which is 13 miles long, rises to the tof the Key, and flows towards Lechlade; the Kennet to near Wroughton, within Mariborough Downs, flows the then east to Mariborough, and so past Hungerford Reading and the Thames at Mariborough it receives Oghourn, near Ramsbury the Aldbourn, and near terrord a brook from Bedwin: the Kennet flows for the through Wiltshire.

s Salisbery Avon is formed by five arms spreading fouth With the Ebele, the Nadder, the Wiley, the i, and the Bourn; the Ebele flows along the south from east to west, and falls into the Avon below bury; the Nadder, is miles long, rises near Shaftes-j under the name of the Don, and flows east to Wilton, is it joins the Wiley; the Wiley, or Willy, rises, under same of the Deverill, near Mere, flows north towards mainster and past Heytesbury, below which a small fin, 6 miles long; flows in; the Wiley, near Wilton, joins Nadder, and then flows to the Avon at Salisbury, being siles long; the Avon rises near Devizes, in North Wilts, keeps a sontherly direction, taking near Russhall the weey stream, and so going past Amesbury to Salisbury; sw Salisbury the Avon, after taking the Ebele, flows Hampshire, and so towards the sea at Christchurch; whole length in Wiltshire is 41 miles. Near Mere some the feeders of the Dorsetshire Stour rise.

None of the Wittshire rivers are of much use for navigaa, but they turn mills and feed the canals. The average yearly rainfall for the whole county of Wilts may be taken at about 30 inches per annum, which is less than that of the adjoining districts on the south and west. Daily measurements of the amount of rain are made at fifteen places in the county, and from the results published in Symons' British Rainfall we learn that in 1878 (an unusually wet year) most rain (40½ inches) fell at Corsham, and least (27 inches) at Landford. The line of chalk downs intercepts the southerly and south-westerly winds, which are uaually warm and moist, and, chilling them, causes some of their moisture to descend as rain; still the rainfall is not so great as in Dorset to the south, or in Devon and Cornwall further west, because the winds have already parted with some of the aqueous vapour in passing over those countles before they reach Wiltshire.

The absorbent nature of the rock causes the surface of the chalk country to be always dry, but by deep wells water of excellent quality, though of considerable hardness, may always be obtained.

The north and north-west parts of Wilts belong to the colite formations, and the rest to the chalk. The line separating these two divisions may be taken through Swindon, Caine and Westbury. A small portion of colite comes in at the south-west, between Semley and Tisbury.

The chalk district is divided into two by the vale of Pewsey, or that in which the heads of the Salisbury Avon rise, and which belongs to the Green-sand. The northera chalk district is that of Marlborough Downs, and the southern that of Salisbury Plain. This southern formation is broken by three flats where the chalk has been laid bare, the upper valleys of the Salisbury Avon, the Wiley, and the Nadder. Many of the hills on the Downs are very high. Inkpen Beacon, where the borders of Berks, Hants, and Wilts come together, is the highest chalk hill, being 1,011 feet high. The Salisbury downs or plains form a high bleak ground, with scanty grass, and unpeopled, except in the valleys of the rivers, where the towns and hamlets lie close together.

On one of the hills at Alton Barnes is the figure of a horse of vast size, cut into the chalk, which can be seen at a great distance. There is a similar figure of a horse on the side of Bratton hill, near Westbury. These are generally supposed to be of Celtic origin. At Cherhill, between Calne and Malmesbury, is a similar figure, but executed in modern times.

The Green-eand forms a broad strip skirting the chalk, by the south of Swindon, near Calne, Devizes, Market Lavington, Westbury, Warminster, and Mere; it likewise crops out in the valley of the Nadder, between Hindon and Swallowcliffe. South and south-east of Salisbury we find beds of the Hampshire plastic clay. Kimmeridge clay, cointic freestone, coral rag, calcareous grit, Oxford clay, corn brash, and forest marble, belonging to the upper, middle, and lower colite, crop out in strips beyond the Green-sand, forming the west and north-west of the county: these have many quarries of building stone. There are mineral springs in the Oxford clay. The hills in general do not rise above 400 feet high; but the highest, Alfred's Hill, near Stourhead, is about 800 feet high.

In South Wilts and North-East Wilts there is tillage only in the dales. The great downs are grazed by sheep, though of late in some places, they have been broken up for tillage. North-West Wilts has a subsoil of broken stone, with clay or reddish chalky loam lying upon it: here are richer solls, with much corn land, meadow and dairy ground; the grazing is for cows and oxen, and much cheese is made. The curing of bacon is carried on largely, principally at 'Calne, and many thousand pigs are slaughtered yearly. There is little market gardening.

Wilts yields limestone and freestone, chalk, marl, brick-earth, corn, oxen, cheese, sheep, and wool.

Iron ore is raised to some extent, and there are works for smelting at Westbury and at Seend, near Melksham.

Wilts was formerly a great seat of the clothing trade, but this has much fallen off, though in and around Bradford are many mills and looms: Trowbridge is the head of the broadcloth weaving, which is carried on there, at Bradford, Westbury, and Melksham; also wool dyeing. At Salisbury some cutlery and hardware are made. At Melksham there are looms for hair-cloth weaving and sadking and cooca-nut fibre works. At Chippenham broadcloth and silk are woven. Silk throwing is carried on at Devizes, Mere and Warminster. At Malmesbury silk ribbon is made. Ropes and sacking are made at Marlborough. Flax-spinning, silkthrowing, bed-ticking and cheese-cloth weaving are carried on near Mere. At Wilton are carpet works. Swindon is a great railway workshop. There are malting and brewing in all the large towns. Altogether, the trade of Wilts is large, though it cannot rank with the great manufacturing districts.

The railways belong to the Great Western and South Western Companies: the main line of the Great Western comes in from London, south of Highworth, passes by Swindon, Wootton Bassett, Chippenham, Corsham, and Box, to Bath, and so to Bristol, Reeter and South Devon. Swindon is the chief locomotive and carriage factory of the company. A branch runs from Swindon by Purton and Minety, near Cirencester, to Cheltenham, Gloucester, and South Wales, and through Oxford to Worcester and Birmingham, and so to all parts of the north and east of the island. From Chippenham a line is made, called the Wilts, Somerset and Weymouth, by or near Bradford and Trowbridge to West-Weymouth, by or near Bradford and Trowbridge to Westbury, Warminster, and Frome, and from Warminster a branch line to Salisbury was opened in June, 1856, known as the Salisbury and Warminster line. A line from Reading to Hungerford, and thence to Marlborough and Devizes, joins the main line at Holt near Melksham. A branch from Chippenham to Calne, was opened in November, 1863, called the Calne Railway, but worked by the Great Western Railway Company. The South Western line runs from Basingstoke through Andover to Salisbury, and thence by Dinton and Tishury to Veovil Exeter, and the West of Dinton and Tisbury to Yeovil, Exeter, and the West of England. A branch from Salisbury, through Romsey to Bishopstoke, connects Salisbury with Portsmouth and the South Coast line.

Wiltshire has in the north three great lines of canal. The Thames and Severn Canal skirts the north border, passing by Circnester, Cricklade, and Lechlade. The Kennet and by Cirencester, Crickiade, and Leohiade. The Kennet and Avon Canal passes through the middle of Wilts, by Hungerford, Devizes, and Bradford and mear Trowbridge, to Bath and Bristol. The Wilts and Berks Canal joins the above south of Melkaham, and then is itself joined to the Thames and Severn Canal, by a branch called the North Wilts Canal, between Crickiade and Swindon. North Wilts is thus well provided with canals. South Wilts is almost without canal scommediation. without canal acommodation.

Wilts forms two districts, North and South; of the former the head town is Devizes, where the Spring Assize is held; and of the latter, Salisbury, where the Summer Assize is held. The Epiphany Sessions are held at Devizes, the Easter Sessions at Salisbury, the Midsummer Sessions at Warminster, and the Michaelmas Sessions at Marlborough. The hundreds are as under :-

Wiltshire is mostly in the diocese of Salisbury, except the deaneries of Cricklade and Malmesbury, North and South, which are in that of Gloucester and Bristol, in the archdeaconry of Bristol. The other part forms two archdeaconries: Sarum, with the deaneries of Amesbury, divided into two portions, Chalk, two portions, Wilton and Wylie, two portions; and Wilts, with the deaneries of Avebury, two portions, Marlborough, two portions, and Potterne, three portions. The civil parishes are about 337.

The head town of Wilts is the city of Salisbury, with 13,839 people. Other smaller towns are—Trowbridge 11,308, Bradford 4,871, Devizes 6,839, Warminster 5,786, Marborough 3,660, Chippenham 1,387, Calne 2,468, Westbury 6,396, Swindon, Heytesbury, Melksham, Malmesbury, Cricklade, Wilton, Downton, Hindon and Wootton Bassett. Many of these are very well built, and with good churches and town buildings. Selisbury is well known for its catheral. There is a large college or grammars school at Marl. dral. There is a large college or grammer school at Marborough, and grammar schools in the large towns. There are no watering places or towns of resort, other than for the purposes of business.

Wiltshire seems to take its name from Wilton, the town on the Wiley: it was first held by the Britons. The Romans, under Vespasian, took the country and built many towns, and laid out roads. Sorbiodunum (Old Saram) seems to have been of some note. The West Saxons fought seems to have been of some note. The west cancers require with the Britons many battles, and in 508 Cerdie beat their king Natan-leod: it was not, hawever, till about 577 that they drove the Britons from South Wilts. In 591 there was a great slaughter of the Weish at Wodensbury, or Wanborough, near Swindon. In 715, Ins. King of the West Saxons, and Cholred, King of the Mid-English, fought at the same place. In 871 King Alfred fought with the Dases the same piace. In 871 King Alfred fought with the Bases at Wilton, and was beaten; in 878 they burned Chippenham, but he afterwards beat them at Eddington. In 985 the Danes from East England overran North Wilm, and again in 1003, 1006, 1010, 1015 and 1016. In the Parliamentary war there was a battle in 1648 on Roundway Bown, and the castles and towns of Salisbury, Mariborough, Devizes, Malmesbury, Ludgershall, Warminster and Wardow warm besieged. were besieged.

There are a great many antiquities in Wilts, whereof some e British, some Roman and some Saxon. Stone error are British, some Roman and some Saxon. STONEMERGE is a circle of rough stones on Salisbury Plain, and there is

THE GEOLOGY OF WILTSHIRE.

In the magazine of the Wiltshire Archæological and 388 feet, Tower on Downton Hill 485 feet, Salisbury Natural History Society (vol. XIV), we have a list compiled by Mr. W. Whitaker of 169 papers &c. by 89 authors THE LIAS.—The liassic strata only enter Wiltshire in Natural History Society (vol. XIV), we have a list compiled by Mr. W. Whitaker of 169 papers &c. by 89 authors which relate to the geology of Wilts. The whole of the auriace has been mapped by the officers of the Geological which relate to the geology of whits. The whole of the surface has been mapped by the officers of the Geological Survey (Messrs. Bristow, Aveline, Hull and Whitsker), and the northern portion of the county is described in a "Survey Memoir." by Professor Ramsay. Of local workers we must name Messrs. Cunnington, C. Moore, G. P. Scrope, C. J. A. Meyer, T. Codrington, R. N. Mantell, J. C. Pearce, the Rev. P. B. Brodie, Professors Buckman and Rupert Jones; whilst for our knowledge of the fossils we are largely indebted to Doctors Wright, Lycett and Woodward, Professors Morris, E. Forbes, Mila-Edwards, Bell &c.; unfortunately these works are scattered over numerous and expensive scientific publications, as the volumes of the Palseontographical Society, "the "Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society," the "Geological Magazine," the "Wiltshire Magazine" above referred to &c. Recently Mr. Hudleston and the Rev. J. F. Blake have written a valuable account of the Corallian rocks, and have written a valuable account of the Corallian rocks, and the latter gentleman has also described the Kimmeridge

Clay.
The recent deposits near Salisbury which contain such interesting traces of the early existence of man have been diligently worked by Dr. Blackmore and others, and their "finds" are to be seen in the Blackmore Museum at Salisare to be seen in the Blackmore Museum at Salisbury, which contains a splendid series of the tools and bury, which contains a splendid series of the tools and weapons of both pre-historic man and of modern savage tribes for comparison. The excellent work entitled "Flint Chips," written by Mr. E. T. Stevens, gives a full account of this admirable collection. In the adjoining rooms of the Salisbury and South Wilts Museum there are some fine specimens of local fossils. At Devizes, geological collections may be seen in the museum of the Literary and Scientific Institution, and in the museum of the Witshire Natural History Society. At Marlborough Callege, the School Natural History Society is also doing good work.

The rocks which form the county of Wilts belong mainly to the Secondary or Mesozoic formation: they run across the county in broad irregular bands, which have a general line of direction or strike from north-east to south-west: they incline or slant or dip to the south-east, not lying now horizontally as they did when they were originally deposited on some sea-floor, but tilted up towards the north-west, so that the edges of a number of successive rock-beds are visible, forming the irregular bands we have mentioned above. As the lowest strata are certainly the oldest or first-formed, it follows that those rocks which we find in the north-west of the county, about Bradford, Malmesbury &c. are of the most remote geological age, for as we try to follow these across the strike in a south-casterly direction, we find they pass under newer beds, which in turn pass under the chalk, while the chalk is itself overlain by the Tertiary strata in the south-east corner on the edge of the New Forest,

In describing the strata we shall commence in the north-west with the oldest beds, and then take the others one by one, in ascending order, finally treating of the alluvial and other surface deposits which occur irregularly over the whole

But first looking broadly over the entire county we note that it may be divided into two regions, whose wide difference in appearance, agriculture and population is entirely owing to geological causes. The first of these lies in the north-west and includes about one-third of the county; it norm-west and includes about one-third of the county; it has a level or undulating surface and a south-easterly slope; it is a district of collitic limestones and clays, and the chalk escarpment forms its boundary. The remainder of Wilts—the southern and eastern parts—is mainly formed of chalk, where breezy downs and long level treeless plateaus have a distinctiveness which instantly reveals to the discerning eye the nature of the rock of which they are composed.

The heights above sea-level of a few points determined by the Ordnance Survey are, Highworth Church 442 feet, Cricklade Church 297 feet, Wootton Bassett Church 424 feet, Christian Malford Church 187 feet, Chippenham Church 184 feet, Corsham Church 303 feet, Warminster Town Hall

THE LIAS.—Inc measure means only order washing in the extreme west, running up the valley of the Box Break from Bathford by Ditcheridge to a little beyond Colera. Ditcheridge stands on the Middle Lias; but the hard band called the "Rock-bed" is here very thin, while a few feet of called the "Rock-bed" is here very thin, while a lew set of blue clay which lie upon it belong to the Upper Lies, the beds thus thinning out greatly in this direction. The junction of the Lies with the sands of the Colite above is marked by wet ground, caused by the springs which are thrown out along the top of the impervious clays.

THE OOLETH.—This great assemblage of strate has received its name from the fact that some of the beds of line stone which it contains have a structure like the roe of a fish: it consists of an alternation of beds of sandst limestone and clay, which, as a whole, attain their must-mum development in Gloucestershire, where they form the Cotteswold range; as the colitic strata are followed in a south-easterly direction, they become greatly attenuated. we has been shown by Professor Hull, still in Wiltshire they are of a very respectable thickness.

LOWER COLITE. - Midford Sands. - These are transtion or passage beds connecting the linesic and colitic formations. They contain liassic ammonites, as A. bifress, A. opalinus, &c. and colitic bivalves, as Hinnites abjects, Trigonia striata &c.; as Professor Phillips remarks, "before the literal life had come to an end the ability life. the liassic life had come to an end, the colitic life had begun." The Midford Sands are of a yellow tint, and contain concretionary masses of limestome called "sand-buts;" they occur resting upon the Lias along the sides of the valley of the Box Brook, and are here about 40 feet in thickness Inferior Colite.—This is a buff-coloured sandy stone, under which lies a rubbly hed full of cords. "It occurs at Elmhurst and Upper Shockerwick, and russ up the sides of the Box valley nearly to Slaughterford: from near Box it stretches through Ashley Green and Bathferd to near Bradford." It is well exposed in the bank of the canal opposite Limpley Stoke, and in a gully near Charl-combe church, where it is about 25 feet thick. At Limpley eombe church, where it is about 25 feet thick. At Limply Stoke and Beechen Cliff the Inferior Colits is almost entirely composed of corals, species of Trigonia, Ostres. Brachiopoda &c. Thus the small portion of this stratus which enters Wilts possesses neither the thickness nor the qualities which elsewhere (Cotteswolds, Ham Hill &r.) make it such a valuable building stone.

The Fullers' Barth.—This is a bed of blue and yelow clay, from 60 to 100 feet thick; in the lower parties it contains bands of limestone, the "Fullers' Earth Red." It can be traced by Bonner Down and Ashley Wood to beyond Slaughterford, and then returns on the concains see beyond Slaughterford, and then returns on the opposite side of the valley past Box. The characteristic fossil is a small oyster named Ostrea acuminata. The position of the bed is rendered visible at a distance by the way in which the superincumbent beds of Great Oolite have in places the superincumbent beds of Great Oolite have in places slipped down over the clay; the water which issues plentfully at the junction has lessened the adhesion, and produced the catastrophes. The Fullers' Barth proper is a hydrous silicate of alumina; it is "an unctaous clay, usually of a greenish-brown or greenish-grey colour, sometimes blue: it is opeque, soft, dull, with a greasy feel and an earthy fracture: it yields to the nail and affords a shining streak: It scarcely adheres to the tongue, and fall into a pulpy, impalpable powder when placed in water, without forming a paste with it."—Bristow. It occurs in veins from 18 inches to 3 feet in thickness, and was former! largely dug for fulling at the cloth mills, but it is not now worked.

The Great Oolite.—This division, which is also known as the Bath Oolite, furnishes perhaps the most fances building stone in England. It does not occupy much of the surface of Wiltshire; from near Limpley Stoke 18.

Corsham we can trace it to Yatton Keynell and Castie Combe: it is again exposed in the valley which runs are and west by Great Sherston, and we again find it (this time brought up by a fault) on the east of Tetbury. The thickness of the Great Colite varies from 100 to 200 feet; the upper beds are blue limestones, weathering white when exposed to the atmosphere, and so hard as to have been largely used for mending the roads; below these come the fine colitic freestones which furnish such valuable building material. At Corsham the stone is worked underneath higher strats (forest marile) by means of shafts (sometimes 70 feet deep) and tunnels; the underground quarries here are perhaps the largest and best-worked in the kingdom. Box Hill yields a stone of a very superior quality, as to fineness of texture, called Scallet. "The absence of fossils renders the stone more valuable as a freestone, as it then yields more readily to the saw and to the chisel; when lossils are abundant, the stone is best adapted for rough building purposes, such as walls and the foundations of houses. H. B. Woodward. When first removed from the quarry the stone is soft and moist, and easily carved or saw, but as it dries, it hardens and becomes an excellent hard white stone. Of fossils, univalve shells, such as Nerinea Voltzti, Purpuroidea Morristi &c. and bivalves, as Trigonia constata, Tancredia brevis &c. are abundant, respecially in the upper limestones.

The Forest Marble (with Bradford Clay).—The strats which own this name occupy a considerable surface area in the north and west of Wiltshire. From Bradnce area in the north and west of Wiltshire. From Bradford-on-Avon and Corsham (where they are well exposed in the railway cutting), they run northward to Tethury, and then turning north-east form a tract some 5 or 6 miles wide, on which stand the villages of Ashley, Crudwell and Kemble. The strata are a variable series of shelly limestones, sands and clays, about 60 feet thick near Tethury, but thickening as they are followed southwards. Near Brad ord a thick mean of few, the Bradford Clay is locally developed in as they are followed southwards. Near Brad ord a thick mass of clay, the Bradford Clay, is locally developed in the lower portion of the Forest Marble. It is a pale grey clay about 40 feet thick containing a little carionate of lime and enclosing thin slabs of brownish limestone and sandstone; a fossil called the Pear Encriuite (Apiocrinites rotundus) is abundant in the Bradford Clay; its fragments are called "coach wheels" by the quarrymen. The large slabs of coarse limestone furnished by the Forest Marbli proper are according to Professor Buckman "of great value for forming the sides of piggeries and cattle sheds. The smaller pieces broken up form a very durable material for road-making and some of the thicker blue-centred slabs are used for building purposes. As a soil the Forest Marble is usually poor, but capable of great improvement by draining and cultivation." The remains of the oldest known British Crab (Palacinachus longipes) were found by Mr.

ing and cultivation." The remains of the oldest known British Crab (Palæinachus longipes) were found by Mr. William Bury, in the Forest Marble near Malmesbury. The Cornbrash.—This is a rubbly pale coloured earthy limestone, about 20 feet thick. We can trace it between Trowbridge and Semington, and round Great Chalfield and Atford; from Corsham and Chippenham it runs by Kington, Hullasington, and Malwesbury. to Chalkon and Park. Hullavington and Malmesbury to Charlton and Pool Keynes. At Rodborne it is quarried for rough building keynes. At Rodborne it is quarried for rough business stone. The fossils are numerous and include Ammonites Hercepi, Avicula echinata, &c. Numerous villages occur along the outcrop of the Cornbrash, as it is a water-yielding along the outerop of the Cornbrash, as it is a water-yielding stratum; it furnishes a good corn growing soil.

MIDDLE OOLITE.—The Oxford Clay (with Kellatays Rock.)—This formation consists of blue clay, weathering yellow near the surface and here attains a thickness of abut 500 feet. Near its base is a fossiliferous bed of calcareous and stone called Kelloway or Kellaways' Rock, either after the village of that name near Chippenham (Woodward) or because it occurred in pits belonging to a man named Kelloway (Raumsay). The Oxford Clay extends from Bradley and Melksham for Christian Malford: then between Wootlecause it occurred in pits belonging to a man named Keloway (Ramsay). The Oxford Clay extends from Bradley and Melksham to Christian Malford; then between Wootton Bassett and Malmesbury the outcrop is 7 miles in width and so it continues by Purton station, South Cerney and Cricklade, towards Lechlade; sections are exposed in the cuttings of the Great Western railway and in brickvards near Malmesbury and at Minety station. The Ox-lord Clay forms a stiff heavy soil, difficult to cultivate and iord Clay forms a stiff heavy soil, difficult to cultivate and mostly in permanent pasture, the old Forest of Braydon s'ood on it and there are still many woods. Of fossils the large flattish oysterlike shell (Gryphæa didatata) is abundant, Ammonites and Belemnites are also plentiful. In making the railway cutting near Christian Malford, about 1840, many fossils were found including some new forms of rephalopods which were described by Mr. Pearce under the name of Belemnoteuthis, even the impressions of their soft parts were wonderfully preserved. Remarkable branches of some coniferous trees from the Oxford Clay of this locality have been figured by Mr. Carruthers in the "Geological Magazine" (vol. VII.); he there remarks that it would be rery desirable if foliage or fruit could also be found.

The Coral Rag.—The thick beds of clay we have just escribed were probably deposited in a moderately deep and ranquil sea. After the accumulation of a great thickness f mud, an elevation of the sen-floor accompanied by a learing of the waters made the conditions fit for the growth of coral reefs. In the Coral Rag, we have bed of rubbly colitic limestone full of the remains of corals and about 20 feet thick: it is accompanied by beds of sand and cal-careous sandstones, termed the Upper and the *Lower Cal-*careous Grit. Near Westbury a bed of iron-ore (hydrated peroxide) has been largely worked; it occupies a narrow strip of ground running north and south near the railway station and the bed of ore is from 11 to 14 feet in thickness. In 1877 there were raised 79,176 ions of iron-ore valued at £19,784. Ostrea deltoidea is a very common fossil here. At Steeple Ashton, many fine corals such as Thecosmilia annularis are found, mostly on the surface of the ploughed fields; at Seend the Lower Calcareous Grit is well exposed where the furnaces for the iron-ore stand. From this point we can follow the beds by Westbrook to Caine and thence by Hillmarton and Purton to Highworth. At the latter place the total thickness is about 100 feet and fine sections are exhibited, where the beds are quarried for building stone. Spines and plates of a sea-urchin (Cidaris Physically this bed forms a ridge or escarpment rising about 100 feet above the plain of Oxford Clay; by its decomposition it produces a light sandy arable soil. At Caine specimens of a new genus of sea-urchin (Pelanechinus) which possessed a flexible test have been found by Mr. Keeping.

UPPER OOLITE.—Kimnv ridge Clay.—Between Semley, possessed a flexible test have been found by Mr. Keeping.

UPPER OOLITE.—Kimmvridge Clay.—Between Semley, Sedghill, and Knoyle Common, we find a bed of bluish shaly clay, about 65 feet thick; we can trace it again on the north-east, between Westbury station, Worton and Bulkington; it is then overlanged and concealed by newer strata, but we recover it again at Olney Marsh, and find it to thicken northwards to 500 feet at Swindon, where its outcrop is also broad, occupying all the ground between Swindon on the cast and Wootton Bassett and Stratton St. Mardon on the east and Wootton Bassett and Stratton St. Margaret's on the west. There are large brick pits in this formation at Swindon; here Ammonites biplex is common in a bed of sandstone, and limestone nodules occur; Ostrea deltoiden is another common fossil. In these plts in 1874 bones of enormous extinct reptiles (Omosaurus &c.) were found, which were extracted and removed with great skill by Mr. W. Davies, of the British Museum, and have since been described by Professor Owen.

Partial Reals State Strate of this age are exposed in three Portland Bads.—Strata of this age are exposed in three separate areas in Wiltshire. At Chilmark and Tisbury, in the valley of the Nadder, about 12 miles west of Salisbury, there are large quarries in a silicoous limestone of which Salisbury Cathedral and Wilton Abbey were built. At Tisbury about 61 feet of stone are seen in the quarries, and the beds here contain beautiful yellow crystals of sulphate of barytes (sugar candy stone). A coral (Isastræa oblonga) which has been converted into flint and chert, is also plentiful at Tisbury. In the valley east of Worton and south of Pottern sandy be is of the same age occur. Lastly in the stone quarries at Swindon we see about 8 feet of yellowish Portland stone, underlaid by sands 25 feet thick; there is an outlying mass round the village of Bourton.

The Portlandian Beds are a marine shallow water series, indicating an upheaval of the collic sea bottom.

Purbeck Beds.—Strata of this age occur at two points only: at Teffont Evias, Chicksgrove and Chilmark Common slabs of a thin compact limestone are raised for tiling; at Swindon we see in the stone quarries about 10 feet of fresh water marls and limestones of Purbeck age, which have yielded to the diligent researches of Mr. C. Moore, of Bath, more than 80 species of fossils, including teeth of mammals, bones of the oldest true frog, together with fruits and seeds and such fresh water shells as Paludina and Bithynia. They thus show a continuation of that upheaval of the colitic sea floor which we have already noted when describing the Portland Beds, and which finally resulted in the formation of a continent occupying part of what is now the Atlantic Ocean.

NEOCOMIAN (OR LOWER CRETACEOUS) FORMATION. Over the continent just referred to a great river flowed east-

Over the continent just referred to a great fiver flowed east-wards, the deposits in whose estuary constitute the Hastings Sands and Weald Clay of Kent, Surrey and Sussex; of the Hastings Sands a small outcrop has been mapped by the Geological Survey at Catherine Ford on the Nadder.

Lower Greensand.—The sandy beds of this age are from 25 to 30 feet thick; they commence on the south at Poulshot Green, near to which is an outlier at Seend, where a patch of Lower Greensand rests on Kimmeridge clay; here it contains a rich bed of iron ore which has been largely worked. The outcrop broadens between Rowde, Bromham, and Rowder Hill but soon parrows again to a hand about a worked. The outcrop broadens between Rowde, Bromham, and Bowden Hill, but soon narrows again to a band about a quarter of a mile wide, which can be traced by the dryness of the ground through Blackland, Corton and Swindon Reservoir. At Sands farm, east of Calne, a bed of very pure and white quartz sand has long been worked, and is carried to great distances for domestic purposes. Fossils are scanty, but the curious shell Diceras Lonsdalii has been found. The beds are evidently a marine littoral formed by cutting away the turf on the chalk escarpment. Microscopical examination shows chalk to be composed and the control of animals called foraminifers; it was deposit, and indicate subsidence.

THE CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—The lowest division of the cretaceous beds proper is termed the Gault. It is a stiff blue clay, full of small spangles of mica, and occasionally it contains calcareous concretions, septaria, and sionally it contains calcareous concretions, septaria, and phosphatic nodules; it varies in thickness from 80 to 140 feet and can be traced continuously as a band of low ground at the base of the chalk escarpment from Dilton by Westbury, Coulston, Heddington, Cliffe Pypard, Wroughton, to Wanborough Marsh and Hinton Mill. It is worked for brickmaking at several points along this line. The Gault is found along both sides of the Nadder Valley, at Donhead and Sutton Mandeville on the south side, and at Dirton on the north, but is absent at East Knoyle. at Dinton on the north, but is absent at East Knoyle.

The Upper Greensand is in thickness equal to the Gault. It is a grey or brown sand, speckled with green grains and containing irregular beds of sandstone and chert. From Shaftesbury it passes eastwards by Charlton and Berwick St. John to Barford St. Martin; then turns west by Knoyle, skirting the chalk by Warminster and West-bury and then running like a bay into the chalk past Pewsey and Milston to Burbage. From Devizes the outcrop narrows greatly through Cherhill, Compton Bassett, Wanbrough, and Little Hinton. Many echlooderms (seaurchins) have been found in this formation in the neighbourhood of Warminster.

The Chalk.—The well-known pure white earthy limestone which we call "Chalk," occupies a larger area in Wiltshire than all the other strata put together. From Cranborne Chace in the south it stretches over Salisbury Plain and then passes north-east by Marlborough: its total thickness is here about 800 feet, in which the following sub-divisions can be traced. At the base we have a bed called Chloritic Marl about 6 feet thick; it is of a pale yellow colour with green grains of glauconite and phosphatic nodules. Next comes the Chalk Marl (locally called Malm) or Grey Chalk, about 50 feet thick; springs issue from the top, but in summer these become so dried up issue from the top, but in summer these become so dried up as to be without water for months together; shark's teeth are common, with Ammonites varians and other fossils; above this we have the Lower Chalk, or Chalk without-flints, about 300 feet thick; it is softer than the Upper Chalk, and of milk-white or creamy tint. The Upper Chalk, or Chalk-with-flints, is about 400 feet thick; the layers of flint which mark the planes of bedding form a conspicuous feature in pits in the Upper Chalk, and conspicuous feature in pits in the Upper Chalk, and enable us at once to distinguish it from the beds below. Possils are common, mostly rounded sea urchins, as Ananchytes ovatus, Cidaris, Micraster and Galerites, with remains of sponges and Ventriculites.

Between the Upper and Lower Chalk is a hard bed which Mr. Whitaker has named the Chalk Rock: it is a hard cream-coloured chalk with layers of green nodules, is well cream-coloured chalk with layers of green nodules, is well jointed, breaks with an even fracture, and rings under the hammer; sections are exposed near the top of the road-cutting on the northern side of the Pewsey Valley, about 4 miles S.S.W. of Marlborough, also at Leigh Hill, and on the top of Whitesheet Hill, where it is about 3 feet thick.

The Chalk forms a bold escarpment facing west and north; in North Wilts "the unequal denudation of the hard and soft chalk forms a striking feature, especially when viewed from the north-west and west. The hard hall viewe about out to the high and head a better of when viewed from the north-west and west. The hard chalk rising abruptly out of the high and broad plateau of the soft chalk, the bare greasy sides and tops of the former contrast strongly with the cultivated plains of the latter; and while the plateau of the Lower Chalk rises and falls in gentle undulations, interspersed with small streams, the Upper Chalk is cut up into numerous ridges and valleys, and is nearly destitute of water."—Aveline.

The "balks," or "linchets," or terraces which run along the slopes of the chalk escarpment are due to the down-wash of soil by rain.

The Upper Chalk forms a white land, with a scanty covering of soil and a short sweet turf, the beech and box grow well upon it, and it affords pasturage for great flocks of sheep; much of it, however, has of late years been brought under cultivation. The great expanse of this rock which is about equally divided between Hants and Wilts forms what Pennant calls the "great central Patria of the chalk," the centre whence all the ranges of this rock traversing our island diverge. our island diverge.

There are many pits or quarries where the chalk is worked to burn into lime. "At Bishopston Down, near Warminster, enormous blocks of crystalline carbonate of lime, one of which weighed 50 cwt. were cut into slabs for mautel-pieces. Calcareous spar also occurs in a chalk-quarry at Nook, near Heytesbury, in blocks less both in number and size."—Conybears.

of the minute shells of animals called foraminifera; it was formed by their slow deposition on the bed of a deep ocean.

TERTIARY PERIOD.—ECCENE FORMATION.—Though the beds we are now about to describe rest upon the chalk, there intervenes a period of time to be reckoned perhaps in millions of years. For during this interval the whole life of there intervenes a period of time to be receased permis in millions of years. For during this interval the whole life of the globe had had time to change; not one species of animal or plant is common to the chalk and to these Eocene bets which rest upon it, and such a change could only have been accomplished in a vast period of time. The Bocene strate of England lie in two basins, viz., the London Basin and the Hampshire Basin; outliers only of the former occur in Wilts, but of the latter the main outcrop enters the southeastern enterprise of the country.

eastern extremity of the county.

Hampshire Basin.—On each side of the chalk ridge called Dean Hill, about 5 miles south-east of Salisbury, we find a narrow band of the Woolcoich and Reading Beds-unfossiliferous plastic clays and mottled sands. On these rests the London Clay, forming the Earldom Woods, Bentley rests the London Clay, forming the Earldom Woods, Senter Wood, &c. Then we get the Bagshot Sands, forming Hamptworth, Landford and West Wellow commons, with an outlying patch at Alderbury and West Grinstead.

London Basin.— Capping the hills round Great and Little Bedwin, outliers of the divisions of the Eucene stratt occur. The Reading Beds and London Clay are here very thin, not more than 12 to 15 feet each in thickness, so that we are glose to their original western termination. that we are close to their original western termination.

THE DRIFT OR SURFACE DEPOSITS .- In the counties south of the Thames, no clear evidence of glacial action has yet been made out, and it seems probable that this district was above water when icebergs came sailing over the submerged more central portions of our island. earths of the Marlborough Downs, the clay-with-flints often found upon the chalk, and the flint gravel and quartess gravels which are often found on the Oxford clay are of very dubious and uncertain age; the gravels and alluvid deposits which border the present streams are, however, of much more recent formation, and form the last or newest of the geological series.

The Druid Stones, Sarsens, or Grey Wethers are have blocks of a siliceous sandstone which are strewn in grat numbers over the surface of the chalk. The circles of Stonehenge and Avebury are mainly formed of these stone; the inner circles at Stonehenge however are of precessions. the inner circles at Stonehenge, however, are of greenstore, similar, Professor Ramsay says, to some of the Silurina rocks of North Wales. The Grey Wethers are probably the relics of a bed of sandstone contained in the Bagshot Series, which formerly stretched much further to the west than they do at present. REHISTORIC MAN. - Wilts is rich, indeed, in the remains of races of men of whom no written records exist. The earliest traces of man's presence in this district consist of certain roughly-shaped flint implements found in graves on the sides of the valleys of the Avon, Wiley &c. at Bemeron the sides of the valleys of the Avon, Wiley &c. at Benerton, Fisherton, Milford Hill, Lake, Ashford, Britford, Downton &c. These gravel-beds are from 40 to 100 fet above the present level of the rivers, a fact which alone marks their great age, since the river has, since their formation, deepened its valley to that extent. These roughtools belong to Sir John Lubbock's Pateolithic Stone Age. Of much later data, and showing marks of the stone tools belong to Sir John Lubbock's Paleolithic Stone Age. Of much later date, and showing marks of great progress, are the elegantly fashioned and skilfully chipped stone inplements of the Neolithic Age—the celts, chisels, scrapers, arrow-heads, knives &c. which have been found scattered on the surface in so many localities in Wiltshire, but more especially at Avebury, Durrington, Everley, Roandway near Devises, Stonehenge, Upton Lovel, West Kamet, Wilsford and Winterbourn Stoke. In the mound of barrows—prehistoric burial places—which stud the Chilk Downs in such numbers, Sir R. C. Hoare found numbers of such objects, which are noted in his magnificent work on such objects, which are noted in his magnificent work of "Ancient Wilts." All or most of these stone objects were the work of men who lived in this country long before the time of the Romans—of men who were ignorant of the properties of metals.

Then we have the grand megalithic structures of Store then we have the grain meganine structures of henge and Avebury, and Silbury Hill, a miniature mountain which covers about 5 acres of ground and rises to a being the state of which covers about 5 acres of ground and rises to a bein of 130 feet; these structures, too, have usually best assigned to Druidic (i.e. pre-Roman) times, but Mr. Fergusson has of late years assigned them a date about 520 A-D and believes that the purpose was to commemorate the twelve great battles in which King Arthur overthrew for a time the Saxons, but these are questions which below rather to Archwology than to Geology.

BRADFORD-ON-AVON.

BRADPORD-ON-Avon is a market and union town and tation on the Wilts, Somerset and Dorset railway, and arish, in the Northern division of the county, near Somersthire, hundred and petty sessional division of Bradford, locese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Wilts and rural 2 west from Devizes and 12 north from Warminster: it is built within a recess, on the abrupt declivities of the sides of a rocky hill. The most ancient parts of the town are laid out in a succession of terraces, rising one above another to the very summit of the hill, from one of which, called TORY RANK, the views are very picturesque, and the prospect is extensive and delightfully varied; in the valley below stands the fine old parish church; near to its base, after emerging from between the hills, flows the river Avon, its banks dotted with factories: on the west, and under the side of Grip Hill, is a fine old barn, called "Barton the suce of Grip Hill, is a line old barn, called "Barton Barn," formerly belonging to the "Grange," or principal farm of the Abbess of Shaftesbury: on the east is the greater portion of the town, while in the foreground may be seen the village of Hilperton, and the town of Trowbridge, with Westbury Down and the Wiltshire hills in the Bradford means the "broad ford" over the river and was inhabited as early as the time of the Roman occupation of this part of the country. The town was a place of some consequence even in the time of the West Saxons, being the site of a monastic institution, founded by St. Adhelm in 705, of which some remains atill exist; it was given to the nunnery at Shaftesbury in 1001. In 954 St. Dunstan was elected Bishop of Worcester at a synod held at Bradford; it was of importance before, as well as after the Norman invasion, and this town was privileged to send members to Parliament; but this right was not exercised more than once: a portion of the town still bears the appellation of the Borough of Bradford, but whether it was ever incorporated and had a separate jurisdiction seems to be unknown. The local government is vested in the county magistrates, who hold a petty sessions here the last Wednesday in every month. The river Avon is here crossed by two bridges; standing on one of the piers of the bridge that crosses it in the centre of the town is a square stone building, having a roof somewhat in the form of a pyramid; the supposition is, that it was erected for the purpose of levying contributions for the support of an hospital which stood near the bridge, or that it was a chapel containing the image of the patron saint, before whose shrine the pligrim might pay at once his devotions and his alms. Near the same, to the west, is the ancient ford by which the town was approached;

at times it can be crossed dry-shod. The other bridge, called Barton Bridge, with four arches, is lower down the stream.

Bradford is considered to be a very pleasing, exceedingly picturesque, and very healthy town, well defended from the morth and east winds, while all impurities, after passing down its aloping streets, are immediately carried off by the waters of the Avon: the houses are mostly gable-fronted, built with stone, and roofed with the same material. The streets are generally narrow and irregular, but, in some instances, they have been widened and improved. In 1834 the town was lighted with gas; and on the 15th of July, 1830 the Barifield with gas; and on the 15th of July, 1830 the Barifield with gas; and on forming part the streets are considered and improved. In 1834 the town was lighted with gas; and on the 15th of July, 1839, the Bradford Town Improvement Act received the Royal Assent.

The church of the Holy Trinity is an ancient and handsome structure, in the Norman and Early English styles: it consists of a chancel, nave, north aisle, and chapel, and has a square tower at the western extremity, with an embattled parapet, and surmounted by a low short spire of disproportionate dimensions; the tower contains a fine peal of 8 bells, and a set of chimes playing the tunes of "Hanover" and the "Sicilian Mariners' Hymn" every three hours: in the churchyard, opposite the door on the south side of the chancel, is a very ancient tomb, highly decorated: there are many other curious tombs, of which the most remarkable are in the chancel; on the south side, within a niche, is the muti-lated recumbent figure of a knight in armour; on the north side is a niche containing the full-length effigy of a lady: some stained windows were presented many years ago by John Ferret esq. a native of this town: about 1855, a handsome east window was put in, and more recently, the west window of the tower; and a stained window has been placed at the east end of the north alse to the memory of Mr. Emanuel Taylor, his wife, and only daughter, he having been church was the control of the control o been churchwarden over twenty years. The register dates from the year 1565. The living is a vicarage, the tithes of the benefice being commuted at the yearly sum of £391, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol and held by the Rev. William Henry Jones M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, canon of Salisbury P.S.A.

Christ Church is an ecclesistical parish, formed in 1843; the church was erected at Bearfield, in 1840, within the the church was erected at Bearned, in 1000, within the town; it is in the Perpendicular style, consisting of a chancel and nave, with a tower and lofty spire at the western end and I bell; the chancel was added from designs by the late Sir Gilbert Scott R.A. at a cost of £2,000; there is a stained east window representing the Ascension. The register dates from the year 1842. The living is a vicarage, vearly value £300, with residence, endowed by the Beds siastical Commissioners, in the gift of the vicar of Bradford, and held by the Rev. Richard Umfraville Lambert M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The population in 1871 was the sole expense of Miss Poynder, of Leigh House.

There is a Free school in Church street, which has as endowment of about £55 a year, founded in 1713; an Infant school in Church yard; an Infant school in Misse's lane; and a school on the British. system in 8t. Margaret street, held in what was once a Friends' meeting-house, built in 1718.

The Dissenting chapels are — Baptist, founded 1704; Baptist, Zion, founded 1823; Countess of Hustingdon's, Bearfield, founded 1798; Congregational, founded 1740; Primitive Methodist, founded 1845; Unitarian; Wesleyan Methodist, founded 1818.

In the Frome road are two almahouses—one for four post men, founded by John Hall esq. the last of an ascient family who had been inhabitants of this townsince the reign of Edward I.; his arms and erest are over the doorwaymotto, "Deo et pauperibus" (for God and the poor), date 1700: the other, for poor old women, is a very sucient charity, endowed with lands in the neighbourhood, that once belonged to the monastery of Shaftesbury; this charity is in the patronage of the lord of the manor, and has recently, by the erection of a fourth almshouse, been restored to what it was originally; four old women enjoy the benefits of this endowment. The charities for distribution amount to £96 yearly.

Bradford was at one time the central town in the west of England for the manufacture of superfine broadcloths: this business is known to have been carried on here to some extent in the time of King Edward I. Edward III. invited extent in the time of king baward 1. Ward in the cloth-workers to repair to England out of foreign parts, whom he granted aundry privileges. Anthony Methem, the ancestor of the present Lord Methuen, of Corshan House, Wilts, was the first to improve upon the old mode to the 12th of 12th to 12th built in the heart of the town: attached, and forming put of the design, are justice rooms and dwellings for the point; the structure is of Bath stone: the style is Early English. designed by Thomas Fuller esq. architect, late of Star The Literary Institution, Savings Bank, and Town Commission and Urban Sanitary Authority's offices are all is this building, as also the Armoury of the Ninth Wild-Volunteers, which was embodied in 1860, and now number shout 70 efficient members. about 70 efficient members.

There are many good residences in and about Bradford, also some large and ancient mansions; one amongst the number was once the residence of the notorious Duches of Kingston, and is known as Kingston House; it has with the last few years been beautifully restored, in strict accordance with its original design, by the present owner & Moulton esq. J.P.

There are the remains of many ancient edifices, both of a private and also of an ecclesiastical character, in and about the town, such as the Saxon Chapel, Priory, Changel House, Tory Hermitage, besides others, which, from lape of time, their dilapidated condition, or partial incorporated with other buildings, cannot now be specified by name, their foundations, as well as their subsequent history, slike being lost. Of these the Saxon Chapel is not because the saxon Chapel in their foundations, as well as their subsequent history, slar being lost. Of these the Saxon Chapel is perhaps the not interesting; it is probably the only perfect charch of it date in England, and is believed to be the ecclesida, will little church, attached to the monastery before mentioned as founded by St. Adhelm, and which is mentioned! William of Malmesbury as standing in his time, And 1120, although the monastery had been destroyed: it even its discovery to the archeological intelligence of the pressivicar, who, standing on Tory Rank about 1858 and loskir. its discovery to the archæological intelligence of the pressivicar, who, standing on Tory Rank about 1858 and looking down on the roofs of the town, observed that the onlies of the three roofs of a very old building was of an ecclesionecharacter, and that the roofs were apparently those of the chancel, nave and porch of a church; at that time the baning was so surrounded by structures built against it, and y

the accumulation of the dirtof centuries, to the height in some places of six feet above the foundations, that it was difficult to form an accurate judgment on the subject: the building has now been purchased and vested in trustees, and the sur and the surrounding objects cleared away, and the proportions of this sh building fairly displayed:—the existing porch is on the sorth side, but there appears to have been a similar one to the south, so that the church was cruciform: the workmanship is of a rude character: the most striking feature is the great and disproportionate height of the building as compared with its length and breadth: the nave is 24 feet by compared with its length and breadth: the nave is 24 feet by 13, and 25 high: the chancel is 13 feet by 10, and 18 feet high; the porch is 10 feet square and 15 feet high; and the spraing from the chancel to the nave is rather a doorway than an arch, being 3 feet wide and 10 feet high: some progress has been made in the restoration of the church and the reconstruction of the archways, which has been assisted by the fact that many of the original stones have been found, either embedded in the rubbish or worked in to the other highlying, and these have heave people of in their original. buildings, and these have been replaced in their original positions; it has been so far restored, at a cost of £900, as to admit of service being held, and it is estimated that about £900 will be required to complete the restoration of this meient building.

The Hermitage or Tory Chapel stands on Tory Rank, the inhest part of the town, and in 1869, being then in a very dispidated state, passed into the hands of T. B. Saunders displated state, passed into the hands of T. B. Saungers eq. of the Priory, who proceeded to restore it, with great tests and judgment and at considerable expense: it was opened again for public worship in 1871: it is mentioned by Leriand in his "Itinerary" in 1533, and it is also mentioned by Aubrey as follows:—"On the top of the north hill, above Mr. Methwyn'a, is the finest hermitage I have seen in England, several roomes and a very neat chapel of freestone."
Previous to the restoration the interior was excavated to the death of ten feet helds with effort: the east window resepth of ten feet below the floor; the east window remains as it was in Aubrey's time, with the exception of w mullions and repaired tracery; the other windows have been designed from parts of the former window pieces which were found when the ruins were explored; the niche on the south side of the east window has been simply restored; to the most deserving and necessitous families. A very mit and complete history of the parish of Broughton Gifford has been written by the Rev. Prebendary Wilkinson and published in 1859 in the "Wiltshire Archeeological and Natural History Magazine." There was a Roman station near some ground called Bradleys, where many coins of the later empire have been found. There are three boxes of the control of the co of some architectural pretensions in the village—Monkton, the old house at the Cross and another on the common; the first is said to have been erected by the Earl of Hert-ford, son of the Lord Protector Somerset, to whom the manor of Monkton came on the suppression of the Priory of Monkton Farleigh; the second was built by Sir John Horton, lord of the manor, in the year 1629; and the third by William Harding about the year 1700. Sir Charles Parry Hobbouse bart, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is fine mould, lying on gravel, which rests on clay, with a subsoil of a heavier clay. Agricultural industry in this parish consists principally of dairy farming, and it is said that some of the best land in the county for grazing purposes is the pasture at Monkton, by the side of the river Avon. The parish contains 1,677 acres, of which 260 are arable and the remainder pasture; rateable value, £4,471; the population in 1871 was 588.

CALNE.

CALNE is a small and very ancient parliamentary and municipal borough, market and union town, and terminus of a branch railway from Chippenham, opened 3rd of November, 1869, and large parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred and petry sessional division of Caine, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Wilts and rural deanery of Avebury first portion. The town is most dealerly situated, surrounded by hill and dale, upon the old rpad to Bath and Bristol, 88 miles from London by road and 100 by railway, 19 east from Bath, 30 north from Salisbury, 8 north from Devizes and 6 east from Chippen-ham. The town consists principally of one long street, with a few smaller ones branching from it: it is lighted with gas and partially paved, governed by a mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors; it is under a local board of health. Caine parliamentary borough includes the parish of Caine and parts of Blackland and Caistone: it formerly returned two members, but now only one. The houses are built of stone and have generally a modern appearance. In the vicinity of Calne a spot is pointed out as having been a Roman station; in the neighbourhood a number of springs gush forth, sufficient in their united strength to turn several corn mills, and which, with other streams, constitute the head of the Calne or Marden, which flows through the centre of this town on its way to join the Avon near Chippenham.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin stands in the middle of the town: it is a large edifice, externally of the third Pointed style: it consists of chancel, with side chantries, a nave, aisles, and a chapel called the Horse or Cross market; the arcades between the nave and aisles are Norman of the twelfth century; the clerestory is third Pointed; the chancel is Renaissance, said to be after the design of Inigo Jones; the east end is third Pointed: the tower, which is over one of the transepts, has a noble outline, but the details are poor; the old central tower fell in 1678: the church has been restored and partly rebuilt under the direction of Mr. Slater: it has a beautiful pulpit and several stained windows: it has sittings for about 900. There is a parish chest of Queen Elizabeth's time, hooped with iron. The register dates from 1527. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £990, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Salisbury and held by the Rev. John Duncan M.A. of Aberdeen University; a continue of this navish was, on August 14, 1879, for exclesions the east end is third Pointed: the tower, which is over one portion of this parish was, on August 14, 1879, for ecclesias-tical purposes annexed to the adjoining parish of Cherhill. Holy Trinity chapel of ease was erected principally at the expense of the late vicar, the Rev. J. Guthrie: it has sittings for 230: a cemetery is attached of one acre.

The Free Church, Church street, erected at a cost of £6,000, seats 400 people.

The Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists have places of worship, and the Society of Friends have a meeting-house

In this parish are several charities, amounting to £130 yearly, for general distribution; also almshouses for 8 persons.

One of the most important branches of trade in this town are the two large establishments for curing bacon, one belonging to Mesers. Charles Harris & Co. who killed lat year 38,734 pigs; this business was established by the late Mr. Henry Harris about 60 years ago: the other belongs to Mr. Thomas Harris. Here are two branch banks and a savings bank.

The market is on Wednesday.

A branch navigation from Calne unites the Wiltshire and Berkshire canal with that of the Kennet and Avon, opening convenient and extensive water-carriage to every part of the country.

Here is a Servants' Training Institution, established by the late vicar and Mrs. Guthrie in 1849, for the purpose of instructing young girls in the various duties necessary to make a good servant: £10 a year is paid for each girl admitted to be trained, and a considerable income is raised by inities to be trained, and a considerable income is raised of laundry and other work performed by the immates.

In the town there is a Literary Institution and a Friendly Society, under the patronage of the Marquis of Dansdowse, and the vicar is president.

The principal landowners are the Marquis of Landowse, who is lord of the manor, William Henry Poynder esq. and Land Crawse.

Lord Crewe.

The soil is chiefly sandy, except in the valleys, which dip into the Oxford clay.

The parish of Caine occupies a part of the middle solite series of rocks, and contains all the members of that geological division—coral rag, coarse saudstone, alternating with beds of clay and sand. The lower green sand and Kimmeridge clay are found on the eastern side of the parish, immediately overlying the middle colite; the Portland beds being absent and the chalk occurring in the extreme portion of the parish to the east. A bed of the coral rag containing a coarse kind of freestone is worked in the town, and affords a tolerably good building stone: this bed is famous for the remains of echinide (sea-urchins, star fishes, &c.), and other fossils found in it. The land in the district is chiefly is pasture, but not entirely so, there being a considerable por-tion of the sandy soil under the plough. Wheat and beam are grown on the heavier portion, and barley and roots on the lighter. The Marquis of Lansdowne has a large tract a great boon to the working classes. The area of the parish is 8,079 acres; rateable value, £36,177; and the population in 1871 was 5,256. The population of the municipal borough, 2,468; and of the parliamentary borough, 5,315; of the local board district, 3,333.

Sexton, William Hand.

QUEMERFORD, 1 mile south-east; CALSTONE, BLACK-LANDS, 2 south-east; WHETHAM STOCKLEY, 2 south; and part of STUDLEY, 21 north-west, are hamlets and tithings in this parish.

The ecclesiastical parish of DERRY HILL includes a portion of the parish of Calne.

The church of St. Paul was erected in 1855, near the railway station; it is a handsome stone building in the style of the 14th century, and consists of a chancel, nave with clerestory and aisles, a tower with spire, clock which chimes each quarter, and 8 bells. The register dates from the year 1855. The living is a rectory, yearly value £200, in the gift of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol and held by the Rev. Augustus Strong M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. The area is 1.591 Strong M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. The area is 1,591 acres; the population in 1871 was 1,289.

There are Baptist (two), Primitive Methodist (two), Congregational and Wesleyan and Catholic chapels.

e Town Hall, covered Market-yard, Exchange-room and buildings, situated in High street, were erected for the ac-commodation of the town and neighbourhood, at a cost of about £12,000, at the sole expense of the late Joseph Neeld esq. of Grittleton, who was for many years member for the borough of Chippenham: the hall is 50 feet in length, 33 in width, 19 in height, with spacious ante-rooms, and is surwigh, is in neight, with spacious ante-rooms, and is surmounted by the arms of the donor. The Cheese market has a freestone frontage in the High street, surmounted by the old borough arms in carved stone, beneath which is the borough motto, "Unity and Loyalty": I was extended three times during the life of the same gentleman, at a further cost to him of from £4,000 to £5,000.

The market is now held on the second Friday in every month for cheese and eattle and the fourth. Friday for

A causeway, 4½ miles in length, from Chippenham Cliff to Wickhill, Brembill (extending through the parishes of Langley Burrell, Kellaways and Tytherton), was constructed by Maud Heath in the year 1474 (in the reign of King Edward IV.), who gave to certain trustees some houses and land in and near Chippenham to keep the same in repair: she is said by common report to have been a market wo who, having long felt the inconvenience of a swampy walk, devoted the savings of her life to the purpose of providing a good footing for her successors in all time to come: the trustees have extended and renewed the same from their surplus funds, and some years since erected an iron bridge across the Avon at Kellaways, where a raised path, upon 64 arches, exists for the convenience of travellers, and enables them in times of flood, which are frequentin this neighbourhood, to pass the stream in safety: the causeway is marked with upright inscribed stones at intervals, and a monument to the donor has been erected at Wickhill.

Here is a literary and scientific institution.

Ethelswitha, sister of Alfred the Great, who had a redence in Chippenham, was married here to Burhred, king of Mercia, between A.D. 870 and A.D. 880.

Lodowick Muggleton, founder of the sect, Muggletonians, was a native of this parish; Dr. Thomas Scott, the celebrated divine, was born here, October 1638.

The parish contains four manors, of which the following gentlemen are lords:—Graham Francis Moore Michell Esmeade esq. lord of the manor of Monkton; Sir John Needs bart. lord of the manors of Fowlewick and Allington; and Gabriel Goldney esq. M.P. lord of the manor of Chippenham. Lowden, Rowden and Sheldon.

The lords of the manors are the principal landowners.

The area of the parish is 6,981 acres; rateable value,

The population of the parish in 1871 was 5,202. The municipal borough only contained 1,387; and the Parliamestary borough, 6,875.

ALLINGTON is a hamlet, now forming part of the parish of St. Paul, 2 miles north-west from Chippenham.

NETHERMORE, STANLEY and STUDLEY are tithing. The ecclesiastical parish of DERRYHILL extends over a portion of the parish of Chippenham.

CLIFFE PYPARD (or CLYFFE PYPARD) is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Crickiade, in the Northern division of the county, union of Crickiade and Wootton Bassett, chiefly in the hundred of Kingsbridge and hundred of Crickiade, Swindon county court district, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Wilts and rural deanery of Avebury first portion, 4 miles south from Wootton Bassett and 9 south-west from Swindon. The church of St. Peter is a handsome structure of Perpendicuhar architecture (late Henry VII.), consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, and a fine tower at the western end, containing 6 bells: each aisle is divided from the nave by four columns; the chancel, originally of Early English work, but altered to Perpendicular at a later period, was restored to Early English in 1861 by the impropriator and patron, Horatio Nelson Goddard esq. with a memorial east window to the late vicar and patron, the Rev. Edward Goddard and a side window in memory of other members of the Goddard family, to one of whom, who died in 1585, there is also an interesting monument of oak, still in a state of good preservition. vation: a screen of fine oak, painted in the original colours, separates the chancel from the nave and two rectangular screens cut off the eastern extremities of the aisles: in the north wall of the north aisle, under a canopy, is a tomb, once surmounted by a recumbent figure, supposed to be one of the family of Cobbam, who formerly possessed the manor; the pulpit is of the seventeenth century, a good specimen of elaborate carving: the font, an octagon, of Bath stone, a copy of that of Over, Cambridgeshire, was carved by the Rev. F. Goddard, in 1840: a brass of about 1880, of excellast design, embedded in stone, is laid in the north chapel, and is supposed to belong to the Quinten family; a monument of costly work in varied marble fills the western end if this aisle, presenting the fac-simile of a carpenter named Romas Spackman, a native of Clyffe Pypard, who, having massed considerable wealth by his trade, bequeathed the literest of the sum of £1,000 to the following purposes: viz. represerving the above-mentioned monument: secondly, remaintaining a school for the poor children of the parish: management a scale for the portunation of the portunation of the purchase of loaves of bread to be disposed of large sunday after divine service: by a recent order of the larget in Council a new scheme has been issued for the larget management of this charity. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £500, with residence, in the gift of Horatio Nelson Goddard esq. M.A., J.P. and held by the Rev. Charles William Bradford M.A. of Brasencee College, Oxford. The free grant of Cliffe Pypard was made in 1305 to Roger de Cobham by Edward I. from whose desarrance it came into necessaring of John Goddard. whose descendants it came into possession of John Goddard, in 1525: the advowson of the vicarage and the rectorial in 1550: the savewent of the vicarage and the rectornitithes were subsequently purchased by the above John Goddard in the time of Henry VIII. A.D. 1541. In 1686, Sarah, Duchese Dowager of Somerset, bequeathed the manor of Thornhill for the foundation of certain scholarships at Brasenose College, Oxford, and the manor of Broad Town for apprenticing poor boys of this county. Near to the village is a high and very steep ridge or cliff, from which the place takes its name. Various Roman coins have been found in the neighbourhood. The Manor House, a handsome building in the Elisabethan style, the seat of Horatio Nelson Goddard M.A., D.L., J.P. stands in extensive grounds, presenting in every part those changing vistas of hill and dale for which the neighbourhood is so remarkof hill and dale for which the neighbourhood is so remarkable. H. N. Goddard esq. M.A. is lord of the manor of Cliffis Pypard, and Brasenose College, Oxford, of the other. The principal landowners are Horatio Nelson Goddard esq. Brasenose College, Oxford, the trustees of Broad Town Charity, the trustees of Sir Henry Meux bart. C. Broome esq. and the trustees of the late Richard Stratton esq. The soll is of a clayer nature; subsoil, clay and chalk. The chief crops are grass, wheat and beans. The parish comprises 3,985 acres, of which the greater portion is pasture and one-third arable; rateable value, £7,367. The population in 1871 was 880. lation in 1871 was 880.

BUSHTON, 1 mile north-west, and THORNHILL, 11 miles north, are tithings.

Parts of this parish and of Broad Hinton have been formed into a separate ecclesiastical parish under the name of Broad Town, which see.

CRICKLADE is a market and union town, and parliamentary borough, in the Northern division of the county, near the Gloucestershire border, in the hundreds of Highworth, Cricklade and Staple, county court district of Swindon, diocese of Gloucester and Bristol, archdeaconry of Bristol and rural deanery of Cricklade, 84 miles from London, 52 north-by-west from Salisbury, 26 north from Devizes, 7 south-east from Circucester, 8 north-east from Wootton Basset 4 from Porton station 5 from Minety station on Bassett, 4 from Purton station, 5 from Minety station on the Swindon and Gloucester branch of the Great Western railway, and 8 north-east from Swindon. This place is of great antiquity, pleasantly situated in a level tract of country on the south bank of the Thames. In 1015 the town was taken and plundered by Cnut the Dane; it has not been distinguished by any event of national importance since the Conquest. The Thames and Severn canal passes to the north of the town, and is connected with the Wilts and Berks by the North Wilts canal, which passes the town to the south-west. A high balliff is appointed for the town by a jury at the court-leet of the lord of the manor: it is a prescriptive berough, and from the reign of Edward I. exercised the elective franchise with various interruptions till the reign of Henry VI. since which time it regularly returned two members to Parliament till 1782, when the franchise was extended to the adjoining divisions of Highworth, Cricklade and Staple: it now includes 50 parishes. The town consists of one long street, is well payed, and worth, Cricklade and Staple: it now includes 50 parishes. The town consists of one long street, is well paved, and lighted with gas. There is a town estate called Cricklade Waylands, for paving and improving the town. Cricklade comprises two parishes, St. Sampson's and St. Mary's. The church of St. Sampson is a spacious structure, having seats for 640 persons: it is cruciform, with a handsome square embattled tower rising from beautifully proportioned square embattled tower rising from beautifully proportioned arches at the intersections, surmounted by a pierred para-pet and pinnacles, on one of which is the Catherine Wheel, finely executed: the present vestry was formerly a chapel, built by the Hungerford family, who also gave the rent of certain lands to be laid out in great coats and cloaks for poor men and women. The register dates from 1672. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £473, with residence and 61 acres of glebs, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury and held by the Rev. Francis Dyson M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Oxford. The church of St. Mary onsists of chancel, nave and aisles: the chancel is divided onsists of chancel, nave and aisles: the chancel is divided rom the nave by a circular Norman arch of the 11th entury, with the chevron ornament: the sistes are of the 'erpendicular character of the fifteenth century, with Tudor rches: the tower, which contains 4 bells, is low, and overed with ivy. The register dates from 1684. The living is a rectory, yearly value £160, with residence, in the fift of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol and held by ite Rev. Hugh Allan M.A. Near St. Sampson's churchird is a building erected by Robert Jenner, goldsmith, of ondon, in 1652, for the purpose of a school; it was for any years used as a poor-house, but it has lately been restored to its original purpose, and is now used as a National school for the children of both parishes. There is a Gothic Church of England school, built by the late Mr. John Pater. Here are Baytists, Congregational, Primitive Methodists and Wesleyan chapels. For particulars of Cricklade union see Wootton Bassett. Major Henry Smyth, in 1853, gave £1,000 to the two parishes for the promotion of education: it is vested in the hands of five trustees for that purpose. There is also Hodge's charity of £5, to be that purpose. There is also Hodge's charity of £5, to be distributed to ten poor householders, not receiving parochial relief; and 100 acres of land were given to the poor of Cricklade out of the Forest of Braydon, when it was dieafforested by King Charles II. now producing about £182 per annum, one moiety to be distributed to poor men and women not receiving parochial relief, the other moiety to be divided into two equal parts, one part to apprenticing children, the other to papers. The interest of £600 to St. Sampson's and £400 to St. Mary's also, the gift of Major Smyth, is laid out annually in the purchase of warm cotheracter. Smyth, is laid out annually in the purchase of warm clothing for the poor in November. Dunche's charity, consisting of lands, producing about £35 yearly, to decayed householders not receiving parochiai relief. Sir. A. Hungerford's charity, of £22 yearly, is divided into three parts, two whereof are faken by the parish of St. Sampson, and the remaining third by the parish of St. Mary: the money is laid out in great coats, which are given to the poor. Farmor's and Barker's charity of £59 yearly, is distributed to the second poor of both parishes who are not receiving any of the other charities belonging to Cricklade, and not in receipt of parochial relief. There is also a Lummas meadow, alled North meadow, of 104 agres, into which, from Lamthe other charities belonging to Cricklade, and not in re-ceipt of parochial relief. There is also a Lammas meadow, called North meadow, of 104 acres, into which, from Lam-mas to Candlemas, the inhabitants have the right of turning their cattle. A stone cross, which formerly stood in the principal street, was removed into the churchyard of St. Sampson when the old Town Hall was taken down. There is also a stone cross in good preservation in the church-yard of St. Mary's parish. In the parish of St. Mary are the remains of a priory dedicated to St. John the Baptist. the remains of a priory, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, founded in the reign of Henry III. now converted into a private residence; there is also an hospital dedicated to the same patron, and some land belonging to it, in St. Sampson's parish, is still called the Spital. A market for Sampson's parish, is still called the Spital. A market for fat cattle on the third Tuesday in each month is well attended; fairs have been wholly discontinued, with the exception of a pleasure fair on the 21st of September. A room (capable of holding upwards of 300) for public purposes was erected here in 1861 by J. W. Lansdown. Sir John Neeld bart, is lord of the manor of the borough and tithings. The principal landowners are Sir John Neeld, the Fast of Radown and the Fast of Radown and the Fast of St. Commenc.

The church of the Holy Trinity, at Crockerton, was built of Crockerton stone, in the Byzantine style, in 1843: it consists of apsidal chancel and nave: the seats, for 500 persons are entirely free and mappropriated. Here are Primitive Methodist, Congregational and Baptist chapels; and almshouses for six men and two women. Longleat and alushouses for six men and two women. Longleat, the seat of the Marquis of Bath, in this parish, was erected on the site of a priory of Black Canons, by Sir John Thynne: the foundation was laid in January, 1567, and twelve years elapsed before it was completed: it is traditionally asserted that the model was obtained from Italy, and that John of Padua was the architect: the mansion is a parished and presented the standard in the standard was the standard to the standard amidst pleasant woods and scenery, with wide prospects takes a central flight of oaken steps, 10 feet wide, with two over the adjacent country; the park contains a herd of returns, and is adapted to the style and magnitude of the deer and has some fine timber, comprising some venerable building; it is lighted by an octagonal lantern, 15 feet in oaks and some very large Scotch spruce firs, some upwards of 120 feet high: Shire Water Lake, covering 15 acres, is arabeque foliage; the height of the ground floor is 15 feet, within the domain. Sir John Thynne, the founder, died in the next 18, and the third story 12 feet: a fine collection of 1560, and was buried in the church of this parish, in the family portraits adorns the principal apartments, and there chancel of which a monument was erected to his memory; is a valuable library. DEVIZES.

DEVIZES is a municipal and parliamentary borough, market, union and assize town, railway station and military centre, situated on the old road from London to Bath and Bristol, nearly in the centre of the county, of which it is the Sentence of the centre of the county, of which it is the secondary capital and capital of North Wits: it is a polling place for the Northern division of the county, in the hundred of Potterne and Cannings, diocese of Salisbury, architecture and Cannings architecture architecture and Cannings architecture and Cannings architecture architect deacony of Wilts and rural seasory of Potterne first por-tion, 88 miles from London by road, 23 north from Salisbury, tion, 88 miles from London by road, 23 north from Satisbary, 6 north from Market Lavington, 7 south from Calne, 7 east from Melksham and 20 east from Bath, standing on the flat top of a hill, forming a sort of table-land of considerable extent and elevation, which land stretches far away to the west. The town is 500 feet above the level of the sea, and from its lofty and expeced situation is subject to winds from every point of the compass, hence the sair is often cold, plercing and sharp, but dry and salubrious. The nature of the soil varies considerably from the more southern and western parts of the county in the latter stone is abundant, while wells, it is difficult to get a good supply without penetratic; to a great depth. A vast number of fossils are found about

The town is of great but uncertain antiquity, some believing it to be Roman: it is not, however, mentioned in "Domesday Book," but it is thought then to have been called "Kainningham," or the chief town in the manor of "Kannings." The borough of Devizes obtained its first charter from the Empress Maud, the daughter of Henry I.: it was afterwards confirmed by her son Henry II. Two members were returned to Parliament from the time of Edward I. but by the "Representation of the People A::

1867." only one is now returned. The municipal and naria-1867," only one is now returned. The municipal and parisvaries comsiderably from the more southern and western mentary boroughs are co-extensive, and are from north-extensive and are from north-extensive and one parts of the county; in the latter stone is abundant, while to south-west, 2 miles long, 1 mile broad, and one prise the perishes of St. John the Baptist and St. Mary the Virgin, part of St. James or Southbroom and part of the parish of Rowde. For municipal purposes it is divided into the North and South wards: it is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen and 18 town councillors.

A branch of the Wilts, Somerset and Weymouth railway connects the town with the Great Western railway at Chippenham.

The Kennet and Avon canal winds through the valley below the town, and is carried over a hill by a series of twenty-nine locks, and, after passing Devizes on the north-west, takes its course along the country, joining the river Kennet at Hungerford: it affords the means of sending goods to the eastern and western parts of the kingdom, and was com-menced in 1794 and finished in 1805.

The church of St. John the Baptist is a Norman structure, in the form of a Latin cross, with a rectangular tower (containing 8 bells) rising from the intersection: it has a chancel, there are several marble monuments to the Heathoute and Sutton families: the church is 126 feet long, 68 feet wide, and the tower stands 73 feet high. The register dates from the year 1559.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin is for the most part Perpendicular, but with some remains of Norman work in the chancel, and a fine arch at the south porch, and has a chancel, nave, aisles, and a square tower containing 6 bells; four pinnacles are at the western extremity of the building: the church is 132 feet long, 65 feet wide, and the tower is 91 feet high. The register dates from the year 1669.

The living of Devices is a rectory, yearly value £519, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor: it comprises the parishes of St. John the Baptist and that of the Blessed Virgin Mary, being quite distinct from one another for civil matters, but forming a united rectory, and designated as the rectory of St. John the Baptist with the chapel of the

as the rectory of St. John the Baptist with the chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary annexed; held by the Rev. John Hart Burges D.D. of Trinity College, Dublin.

St. Peter's is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1867 from the parishes of Bishop's Canning, and Rowde; the church on the Bath road, opposite the Militia Stores, was built in 1866: it consists of chancel, nave and vestry: all seate are tree. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £50, in the gift of the Bishop of Salisbury and held by the Rev. Henry Augustus Louis Grindle M.A. of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. The area is 90 acres; the population in 1871 was 887.

In 1865 a Catholic church (St. Mary's) was finished, on a site by the banks of the canal: it is a small Gothic build-sisters of St. Joseph.

There are three Baptist chapels, one Congregational and one Wesleyan, and a Friends' Meeting House.

The following charities have been founded for educational purposes by benevolent donors now deceased:— Wylde's foundation, for 5 boys; Woodroffe's foundation, for 10 boys; Bancroft's foundation, for 20 boys; Eyle's foundation, for 6 boys; Imber's, for girls. There are two Town schools for boys and girls, one British school for boys and girls, and two Infant schools.

The endowed absyrtics for distribution amount to £125

The endowed charities for distribution amount to £125 yearly, besides almahouses for 7 persons.

A Government School of Science and Art has been established, which is held in the Grand Jury room of the Assize Courts: there is also a branch class at the Town Hall.

Devizes is the head-quarters of the Wiltshire Friendly Society, agencies of which are established in all parts of the

There are many spacious and handsome buildings and shops, which are mostly of red brick. The market place, of a triangular form, is in a central position, and connected with the main street, which runs off into the Bath road; everal other streets diverge from the market place, and they are altogether laid out in a very curious manner, one they are altogether laid out in a very curious manner, one back street being almost semicircular. The town is well paved, drained, watched, and lighted with gas, and supplied with water: the Gas-works are the property of the Town Council, as the urban sanitary authority. A large and extensive corn and cattle market is held every Thursday, which is the mainstay of the town. In 1814 a Market Pross was erected, at the expense of Viscount Sidmouth, the way are considered the househ for Silvestic and representations. the was recorder of the borough for 90 years, and repreented it in six successive parliaments previous to his elevaented it in six successive parliaments previous to his elevaion to the prerage; it is built of Bath stone: the lower art is square and plain, with a buttress at each angle rowned with a pinnacle; the spire is octagonal, tastefully ecorated with architectural ornaments. Here is also a tenorial to the late Right Hon. G. Sotheron-Estcourt, ormerly member for the county, President of the Poor

Law Board, and founder of the Wilts Friendly Society: it stands in the Market place and consists of a pedestal of Aberdeen granite, over 50 feet in height, surmounted by a status of Mr. Sotheron-Estcourt: at the base are water statuse of Mr. Souseron-nescourt, as the case are wasor troughs for cattle. The Cora Exchange was erected and opened on the 3rd December, 1857, partly by voluntary subscription and by a rate on the town: it is a stone building, 142 feet long by 46 broad; the front consists of four Corinthian columns supporting a handsome corrice, and on the centre is a statue of Ceres with agricultural emblems, by Thorp, of Leeds, and presented by Christopher Darby Griffith esq. then M.P. for the borough; a portion of the roof is of glass; the building is well ventilated, and from its prominent position is a great ornament to the town. There is also a commodious market for dealers in poultry, butter and vegetables, which was rebuilt and enlarged in 1839, and is well supplied on Thursdays; in November, 1862, a monthly cheese market was established, which has become an important one.

The fairs are on the 20th and 21st of April, and 20th and 21st of October, for sheep, cattle, toys, and pedlery, and are held on the Green. Candlemas fair, Pebruary 14th, ia held in Monday Market street.

The Odd Fellows have erected a spacious building in Maryport street, at a cost of about £2,400: it contains a large room in which the society hold their meetings, and which is also let for balls, public entertainments and concerts.

Here are the extensive works of Mesers. Brown & May, agricultural engineers; also a tobacco and snuff manufactory. Quarter sessions are held for the borough.

The Bpiphany sessions for the county, and the Spring assises, are held here; also the petty sessions for the borough, and for that part of the county in the Devizes division.

The County Assize Courts, situated in Northgate street, The County Assize Courts, situated in Northgate street, were erected in 1835: they form an extensive building, comprising a centre, with wings, in the Grecian style, having a pediment, supported by four lonic columns resting on an elevated base, which is approached by a flight of steps. The Town Hall is a handsome building: the front forms a segment of a circle, with four pillars of the Ionic order; in the upper part is the Council Chamber of the Comprehension the long of law Room and the Assemble.

in the upper part is the Council Chamber of the Curpora-tion, the Grand Jury Room, and the Assembly Room; the latter is a very handsome room, and is splendidly decorated. On the Bath road stands Her Majesty's prison; it is near the borders of the canal, was built in 1810, and is of a polygonal shape, the governor's house standing in the centre.

The Savings Bank, a large and handsome stone building, in the style prevalent in the reign of James I. was erected in the year 1848, near the Town Hall: it comprises spacious bank and waiting-rooms, with a large board-rooms, the remainder of the building forms the residence of the actuary: the bank is open for the transaction of business every Thursday from 11 to 1 o'clock; a large business is transacted, the accumulated funds amounting to £63,427. In the same building a Penny Bank has since been started; it is open every Tuesday from 12 to 1, and has been very suc-

The Wilts County Lunatic Asylum was epened on the 19th September, 1851, T. H. Wyatt esq. architect: it is of Bath stone, in the Italian style, situated within 1 mile of the Town Hall: the site is considerably elevated above the level of the adjacent valley of the Avon, though rather less than the town of Devizes itself: it is well sheltered on the northeast and east by the hill of Etchilhampton, which rises at a distance of shouth a mile, the committee of lend belonging. distance of about a mile: the quantity of land belonging to the asylum consists of nearly 65 acres: since the opening many additional blocks have been added to the original building, so that the asylum will now hold about 660 patients.

The Cottage Hospital is in New Park road, and contains six beds. The Hospital for infectious diseases is situated near the union workhouse, and contains four beds. The North Wilts Dispensary for the homosopathic treatment of discase is in Monday Market street.

A Literary and Scientific Institution was established in 1833.

The Museum of the Wiltshire Archeeological and Natural The Museum of the Wiltshire Archeological and Natural History Society is a stone building, situated in Long street; it was formally opened by Gabriel Goldney esq. M.P. the president of the Society, on the 8th September, 1874: the purchase of the property, and the cost of its adaptation to its present purpose, has been met by a subscription from the members: the museum contains the Archeological and Natural History collections of the Society, and a valuable library of books. library of books.

Devizes having been constituted a military centre, bar-racks were erected on the London road, and it is the S8th Brigade Depôt: the 62nd and 99th regiments, and the staff of the Royal Wilts Militia, are the regiments attached to the depôt: the bullding is in the Early English style: Mr. J. Finch, of Plymouth, was the contractor. The present average strength at the barracks is 6 officers and 160 men.

The cottages for a militia staff of 28 sergeants and 10 drummers are on the Bath road.

The 5th Wilts Rifle Volunteers have their head-quarters here, the total strength being 167 members.

There are four Newspapers published in Devizes: the "Devizes Gazette," the "Wiltshire Times," the "Devizes Advertiser," and the "Wiltshire Telegraph."

The town was the residence of Sir Thomas Lawrence in his youthful days, his parents having kept the Bear hotel.

To the north-east is ROUNDWAY DOWN, the abrupt termination of a long ridge of chalk hills stretching west-ward from Marlborough: on its brow, and nearly overlooking the town, are the remains of an ancient earthwork or Roman station.

In a picturesque and romantic situation, to the west of the borough, formerly stood the ancient and celebrated Castle of Devizes, built in the reign of Henry I. by Roger, Bishop of Salisbury: old writers say that, for magnifence, extent, and strength, this castle had not its equal in Europe: it seems that in 1139, Stephen, being jealous of the power of this warlike prelate, sent his minister, William D'Ypres, to lay siege to this castle; it was obstinately defended by Nigel, Bishop of Ely, a nephew of Roger; but Stephen, under threat of hanging the son of Roger, obtained possession, and found a treasure therein of 40,000 marks, besides other valuables. In 1140 Stephen was defeated and taken prisoner at the Battle of Lincoln; the castle then surrendered to the Empress Maud, but she could not long retain it, for in 1141 she found herself so closely besieged in Winchester that she was compelled to flee to Devizes in man's apparel; here there was no more safety, and allowing herself to be enclosed in a bier she passed out unsuspected, making her retreat good to Gloucester. Prince (afterwards King) John held the castle of Devizes for his brother Richard during his absence in the Holy Land. In 1223 Hubert de Burgh, the minister of Henry III. was a prisoner here, but effected his escape to the high altar of St. John's church, from which he was dragged by the soldlers; but the parties engaged being excommunicated by the Bishop of Salisbury, he was restored to the sanctuary of the church: the king, intent upon his destruction, endeavoured, by cutting off the supply of provisions, to starve him to death, but he eventually effected his escape into Wales. These strongholds of the feudal lords proved so troublesome to the reigning sovereign of the time, that many kings, from Henry II. to Henry VII. endeavoured to destroy or disarm them: it is thought that during the stern rule of the latter monarch this building was dismantled or partially destroyed; it must however, have been in a state of good preservation in the time of

At the time of the great civil wars, this neighbourhood was the scene of a desperate conflict between the Parliamentarains, under Sir William Waller, and the Royslits, commanded by Lord Williamt, on the 22nd of September, 1643: the king, for some considerable time after, held the castle and garrison of Devizes, and contemplated concentraing most of his forces here, or in the neighbourhood; but on the 23rd September, 1645, Cromwell in person, accompanied by Fairfax, appeared before the town, when the governor, Sir Charles Lloyd, was forced speedily to capitulate; after which, by order of Parliament, the castle was destroyed, and the fortifications of Devizes razed to the ground. This property is now in the possession of Robert Valentine Learh esq. There is a castellated building standing on a portion of a site of the ancient erection, and which his been greatly enlarged, and the grounds by which it is aurrounded improved during the last few years, at great cost, by the present proprietor: the modern building still retains the name of Devizes Castle.

The population in 1871 was—St. John the Baptist parish, 2,039; St. Mary the Virgin parish, 2,700; part of South Broom. 1,746; part of Rowde parish, 354; municipal and parliamentary limits, 6,839.

Southbroom, or St. James, is to the east of the town, and partly within the borough; it was formerly a chapsir, attached to the parish of Bishop's Cannings, but in 1832 it was made a separate ecclesiastical parish.

The church of St. James stands within the borough, on the Green; it consists of chancel, nave, aisle, and tower: it was rebuilt in 1834, excepting the tower, which is thought to be as old as the time of Henry V.; it is square, much ornamented at the upper part, is 67 feet high, stands at the west end of the church, and contains 4 bells: the church is 85 feet long and 60 feet wide. The register dates from the year 1572. The living is a vicarsge, early value £177. in the gift of the vicar of Bishop's Cannings and held by the Rev. Stafford Tordiffe M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford.

The landowners are the Crown, C. B. H. A. Colston esq. A. Meek esq. Miss Ewart and S. Watson Taylor esq.

The area is 2,648 acres, and the population in 1871 was, including asylum and workhouse, 2,785, of which 1,746 are within the borough of Devizes.

HILMARTON is a parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Kingsbridge, Calne union and county court district, partly in Cricklade parliamentary borough, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Wilts and rural deanery of Avebury first portion, 3 miles north-north-east from Calne, 7 south-west from Wootton Bassett, on the road between the two towns. The church of St. Lawrence has chancel, nave, north aisle, porch, and a square embattled tower, surmounted by four pinnacles: in 1840 the tower was partly rebuilt: the windows of the nave are all of the Perpendicular period, probably about Henry VII.'s of the Perpendicular period, probably about Henry VII.'s time: the nave is separated from the aisle by columns of the Early English order, and the chancel is entered from the aisle through an opening of unusual character in the but-tress of the chancel arch: the chancel windows are all Per-pendicular, the whole having been renewed when the church was partially restored,: the chancel windows are stained: in the aisle, towards the east end, is a founder's tomb, without any recumbent figure, and near it a memorial window of three lights to the late vicar, the Rev. Francis Fisher, the subject the "Good Shepherd;" the chief monu-Fisher, the subject the "Good Shepherd;" the chief monu-ments in the church are those of Calley, Quinton, and Thomas Poynder eaq. who partly restored the church, his son, Thomas H. A. Poynder esq. and Mrs. M. A. Poynder: the seating is chiefly of the old oak, of handsome carved pattern; the greatest curiosity of the church is the old chained Bible, with wooden binding, well restored by the late vicar, who found it in the parish chest in a neglected that the original chain till strends and replaced it at the state, the original chain still attached, and replaced it at the chancel arch: the tower contains a fine peal of 6 bells, one of which is new, the rest of old date: Mr. Street, the

LANGLEY BURRELL is a parish and scattered villege, in the parliamentary borough of Chippenham, Northern division of the county, hundred, union and county court of Chippenham, diocese of Gloucester and Bristol, archdeaconry of Bristol and rural deanery of Malmesbury which they held the property: these are incorrectly desouth, on the river Avon, 12 miles north from Chippenham, scribed by John Aubrey as effigies of Maud Heath and her sisters when the property is these are incorrectly desouth on the river Avon, 12 miles north from Chippenham, scribed by John Aubrey as effigies of Maud Heath and her sisters when the property is these are incorrectly desouth on the river Avon, 14 miles north from Chippenham, lage, in the parliamentary borough of Chippenham, Northern division of the county, hundred, union and county court district of Chippenham, diocese of Gloucester and Bristol, archdescoury of Bristol and rural deanery of Malmesbury south, on the river Avon, 1½ miles north from Chippenham, 7 south from Malmesbury and 11½ north from Devizes, situated on the road from Chippenham to Malmesbury. The Burrells (anciently spelt Borel), were tenants under Edward, Earl of Salisbury [Domesday Book]: they held the manor till about the year 1300: in a document of the date 1240, John Borel, or Burel, one of the family, conveyed to the Abbot of Glastonbury "one croft in the village of Langlegh Burel which is called Penicroft." This name is langlegh Burel which is called Penicroft." This name is still in existence in the parish, relating to a ground near Peckingell Mead. In A.D. 1304 the manor belonged to Sir John Delamere, who, with Alice his wife, obtained a license for an oratory in their "manor of Langley and Lye;" his last presentation to this church was in 1342. In 1343 Thomas, Lord Berkeley, purchased the manor and advowson of Sir J. Delamere, and gave them in the same year, with £2,000 in money, to his daughter Joan, on her marriage with Sir Reginald Cobham. The Cobham arms (a cherron) are on the ceiling of the north sisle of the church: rage with Sir Reginald Cobiam. The Cobiam arms (a cheron) are on the ceiling of the north aisle of the church; to their family is traditionally ascribed the building of the church: this is only partially correct, for the pillars of the north aisle are Norman, dating nearly or quite 100 years before the Cobhams held the property, and probably formed portions of an earlier church on the same site. In 1860 the parton, is eight of his wife Marcanet Cobhams was formed portions of an earlier church on the same site. In 1460 the patron, is right of his wife, Margaret Cobham, was Ralph Neville, Earl of Westmorland. In 1469 Langley Burrell had passed to Edward de Burgh, second Baron de Burgh of Gainsborough, on his marriage with Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Cobham: in that year Lord de Burgh presented to the living. The manor was sold in 1565 by the de Burghs to John Read, and in the twentieth of Elizabeth, 1578, was discharged from feudal homage to the Earls of Salisbury. In 1601, Henry White, then owner of Grittleton, bought the manor: about 1660 H. White's randson sold it to Samuel Ashe ess. in whose family it has grandson sold it to Samuel Ashe esq. in whose family it has temained ever since. The church of St. Peter consists of chancel, nave and north aisle, a square tower on the south ide, the belfry opening into the church, and a chapel beonging to the Ashe family, opening from the chancel, also n the south side: there is a fine pointed arch between the ave and chancel: the arcade of three arches, and the suporting pillars separating the north aisle from the nave, re considerably out of the perpendicular, owing probably an original settlement: the carved woodwork, which present of the ceiling of the aisle, and is very old, bears o trace of any increase in the deflection in later times:

Robert Martyn Ashe M.A. and held by the Rev. John Jeremiah Daniell. Maud Heath, described in old deeds as of Langley Burrell, in 1474 made a bequest for the making and maintenance of a "causey" or stoned path from Bremhill to Chippenham; she enfeoffed certain gentlemen, who, on the death of co-trustees, appointed others, and they have been usually chosen from the gentry and the clergy of the four parishes through which pointed others, and they have been usually chosen from the gentry and the clergy of the four parishes through which the causeway runs: it is 4½ miles long, and is endowed with property in Chippenham to the annual value of between £100 and £200: the iron bridge at Kellaways was thrown over the river Avon a few years ago by money raised on this trust; and the long pathway there raised on numerous arches is maintained by the same. In the year 1652 a book was written by Edward Stokes esq. of Tytherton Lucas, entitled "The Wiltshire Rant, being a narrative of the most unparalleled proplems actions, counterfeit reneatings entitled "The Wiltshire Rant, being a narrative of the most unparalleled propliane actings, counterfelt repeatings and evil speakings of Thomas Webbe, late pretended minister of Langley Burrial:" this pamphlet, of which some copies are still in existence, contains an astounding revelation of profamily and licentiousness: for his scandalous life Webb was ejected in 1651 and committed to prison: escaping containts the mediants who was ejected in 1851 and committed to prison: escaping conviction he brought false charges against the magistrate who committed him, which led to the publication of Mr. Slokes' book: in the novel of "Woodstock," Scott has pourtrayed just such a character as Webb, in Tomkins, the preaching soldier and Fifth Monarchy man. In 1854 the parish was ecclesiastically divided, and a church, named in honour of St. Paul, consecrated for that part of Langley Burrell which is continuous to Changeless. is contiguous to Cirippenham, together with portions of Chippenham parish lying north of the Great Western railway (for which see Chippenham). The Rev. R. M. Ashe M.A. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is clavey and sandy loam, and the land is chiefly in pasture. The area is 1,694 acres; rateable value, £9,186; and the population in 1871 was 1,122, of whom 734 are contained in the parish of St. Paul, Chippenham. Sexton, John Cozens.

The branch of the Great Western railway and 81 from London. The church of All Sainta is in the Later English style, with a nave, south aisle and tower containing 5 bells: the nave was built in the reign of Henry VI.; the aisle at a later date, supposed to have been built by a family of the name of Russell, under a license granted by the king to the De Clintons, who were then lords of the manor: in the church is a Norman font, which is depicted in Atkin's "Ancient Fonts of England:" the church was thoroughly repaired and re-pewed, under the superintendence of the late Rev. Henry T. Streeten, in the years 1841 and, 1842: in 1870 the chancel was lengthened, oak choir stalls and reredos erected, and a vestry and organ chamber thrown out on the north side: the whole floor was laid with Godwin's encaustic tiles: during the alterations remains were found of a Norman stoup and of Lancet windows, which last were probably removed when the present Perpendicular windows were inserted. There is as ancient dilapidated stone cross in the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1579. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £600, in the gift of Pembroke College. Oxford, and held by the Rev. Henry Rudge Hayward x.1. formerly fellow of that college. The ancestors of Whitfield were rectors of this parish twice in succession, about 1832. Here is also a chapel for Primitive Methodists. The trustee of the late A. M. Story Maskelyne esq. are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the Rarl of Shaftebury. Viscount Bolimphroke. David Stephen White sale manor. MALMESBURY,

WITH WESTPORT ST. MARY, CORSTON AND RADBOURNE.

MALMESBURY is an ancient borough and parish and station on the Malmesbury branch of the Great Western railway, 6½ miles from Dauntsey junction, union and small market town, head of a county court district, giving name to the hundred and is a polling-place for the Northern division of the county, in the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol, archdescorry of Bristol and rural deanery of Malmesbury north, 10 miles north from Chippenham, 11 south-west from Cirencester, 6 south-west from Minety station, 5 south-east from Tetbury and 92 from London, pleasantly situated on a bold eminence, and nearly surrounded by the converging branches of the Lower Avon, over which there are six bridges: the town consists of one principal street, High street, crossed at the top by Oxford street and Gloucester street, leading from the latter to Westport St. Mary. MALMESBURY is an ancient borough and parish and sta- 7d.; the only part now remaining is a portion of the mare tion on the Malmesbury branch of the Great Western rail- of the conventual church, which at the Dissolution was parstreet, leading from the latter to Westport St. Mary.

The borough was incorporated by King Athelstan, and is governed by a high steward, an alderman and 12 capital burgesses; since the passing of the Reform Act it only sends one member to Parliament, and the area of the Parliamentary borough has been enlarged to embrace 11 adjoining parishes; the town is lighted with gas, from a gas manufactory erected by subscription.

The town, which seems to have been a Roman settlement, was twice burnt by the Danes, and was the theatre of war during the troubles of Charles I; south-west of the town is Malmesbury Common, or King's heath, which was enclosed under power of an Act of Parliament passed in 1821, according to the provisions of which every freeman in the borough is entitled to possess one allotment, and every capital burgess a plot of from 8 to 15 acres; the highest part of the common is called Shade Hill.

The borough comprises three parishes, St. Paul's, St. Mary Westport and the Abbey district.

The abbey, the remains of which form a splendid monastic ruin, was founded in the seventh century for Benedictine monks; the original founder was one Maildulph, an Irish monk, who came over from his own country and fixed his residence at Malmesbury, and afterwards built a small monastery, wherein he resided with his disciples, the most eminent of whom was Aldhalm who after his restrict death astery, wherein he resided with his disciples, the most com-nent of whom was Aldbelm, who, after his master's death, being assisted by the Bishop of Winchester, converted their little cell into an abbey, of which he became the first abbot: the greatest benefactor to the house was King Athelstan: his monument stands at the east end of the present remains: the Abbot was made a mitred parliamentary baron by Edward III.; the revenue at the Dissolution amounted to £803 17s. there is also a small market for provisions on Saturday.

of the conventual church, which at the Dissolution was purchased by a clothier of the town named Stumpe, and under the authority of a license from Archbishop Cranner, was substituted for the old church of St. Paul, which had become dilapidated, and it has since been used as the parish church: it consists of a chancel, lofty nave, lighted by clerestory windows, aisles, separated by circular piers and lofty pointed arches: the windows are in the Decorated style: the rool is heavy lightly gradued and arched, over the community table. beautifully groined and arched: over the communion table is a painting of Christ raising Lazarus, the gift of the Est of Suffolk, and at the west end is a handsome organ: the church was repaired in 1823; the south porch contains some very elaborate sculpture, including the figures of the Twelet Apostles. The register, which is in good preservation, date from 1500. The benefice of Malmesbury is a vicarage, with the chapelries of Corston and Rodbourne annexed, just the chapelries of Corston and Rodbourne annexed, just yearly value £400, in the gift of the trustees of the law Rev. Charles Kemble and held by the Rev. George Windsor Tucker B.A. of Trinity College, Oxford.

The parish of Westport St. Mary forms part of the town. The church of St. Mary, Westport, is in mixed style, and consists of a chancel, nave, aisles and turret: the mare is divided from the aisles by six arches: the south aisle is entirely occupied by free sittings. The register date from 1678. The living is a vicarsage, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held by the Rev. George Windsor Tacker B.A. of Trinity College, Oxford.

There are two Congregational chapels in the town, and the Calvinistic Baptists and Moravians have places of worship here. The Congregational chapel at Westport St. Mary, is an elegant structure, having been rebuilt at a cost of $2,000. which was defrayed by contributions: it combines under one roof a chapel, with sittings for 500 persons, school class room and vestry, sufficient to hold 400 pupils.

Burnivale Ragged school was opened in February, 1870: the building was erected by Walter Powell esq. m.P. and the site was given by Thomas Luce esq.; it is supported by contributions.

There are several almshouses and some charities for the benefit of the poor, amounting to £100 yearly.

There is a Town Hall; also a Market place. The market are held on the third wednesday in every month for cattle:

There are three breweries and a silk manufactory, a water company and a gas company. Pillow lace is made here, but not so extensively as formerly.

Near Cross Hayes is a reading-room and free library, erected and entirely supported by Walter Powell esq. M.P.

In the old Market place is an octagonal stone market cross, with flying buttresses and pinnacles, crowned by a richly sculptured turret, built in the reign of Henry VII.

The historian, William of Malmesbury, was precentor of the abbey church. The celebrated philosopher, Thomas Hobbes, was a native of Malmesbury, and the house in which he is supposed to have resided is still standing, near the Westport church: he was born in 1588, and died at Hardwick Hall, Derbyshire, at the age of 91: there is a tomb in Ault Hucknall church, Derbyshire, to his memory. The town gives the title of Earl to the Harris family.

Lord Northwick is lord of the manor of Malmesbury and westport. The principal landowners are the Earl of Suffolk and Berksbire, the Earl of Radnor, Sir R. H. Pollen bart. Mrs. Lovell and Daniel Beak esq.

The area of Malmesbury is 5,142, and Westport 1,341 acres; rateable values, Malmesbury £12,399, Abbey £453, Westport St. Mary £4,860; the population of the town in 1871 was 3,123; the population of Malmesbury St. Paul was 2,250; Malmesbury Abbey parish, 156; Westport St. Mary parish, 1,774; the entire population of the parliamentary borough, 6,879.

Parish Clerk of St. Paul. William Croome.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE.

Founded, 1843. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1845.
Additional charter, 1858

Marlborough College, situated at the western extremity of the High street, was erected on the site of the ancient castle, the High street, was erected on the site of the ancient castle, which was afterwards an ina, and now forms a magnificant group of buildings: this institution had its origin in an association to secure a liberal education, more especially for the sons of clergymen, preparatory to that of the universities, on economical terms: in the year 1845 the institution was incorporated by letters patent, under the name of Marlborough College, and by the charter of incorporation the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being was appointed perpetual visitor, and the Bishops of London and salisbury perpetual governors. the latter being also meani-Salisbury perpetual governors, the latter being also president of the Council; the charter further provides that the duties and doctrines of Christianity, as the same are received and taught by the United Church of England and Ireland, and also the various branches of literature (including the and also the various branches of literature (including the ancient and modern languages) and science, shall be taught in the said College, under the superintendence of a member of one of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge (who shall be designated Master of Marlborough College); and such other assistant masters, professors, and tutors, shall be appointed by the Council as they may see occasion: by the original charter two-thirds of the pupils must be sons of clergymen, and the rest may be sons of laymen; but by a second charter, granted in 1849, one half of the pupils may be sons of laymen. The College is divided into three school. In the —the upper, the modern, and the lower school. In the upper school the education is chiefly intended as a preparafor the universities, and is therefore mainly class In the modern school the subjects of instruction are Latin, French, German, history, geography, and natural science, with special classes for subjects of examination at Woolwich. The lower school is preparatory for the upper and modern schools; the Bible and Church Catechism form part of the regular instruction in all the schools. There are ten Exhibitions gular instruction in all the schools. There are ten Exhibitions to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge; three vacant annually, worth £50, £40, and £30 respectively, tenable for three years, and a fourth, vacant once in three years, of the annual value of £22 10s. Annually in December there is an election to 15 "Foundation Scholarships," of the value of £30 a year each, tenable so long as the holders remain as the scholarships, and confined to the area of electrons and confined to the area of electrons and confined to the area of electrons. the college, and confined to the sons of clergymen, nominated by life governors. There are in all 70 of these Foundation scholarships; also a certain number of "Senior Scholarships; scholarships; also a certain number of "Senior Scholarships," of the value of £50 a year each, open to all boys under 15 years of age on the lat of January before the election. Two are open for competition every year, and tenable during good behaviour, as long as the holders remain at the school. Also a certain number of "Junior Scholarships," of the value of £30 a year, open to all boys under 14 years of age on the 1st of January before the election; six vacant annually, and tenable at the college for two years. Two scholarships, each of the value of £30, tenable to rone year, are given annually to the modern school, open to all boys under the age of 17 and 15 respectively. Three scholarships (two founded by the late Dean Ireland, and the third by the late Archdeacon Berens), of the yearly value of £15, tensble as long as the holders remain at college; candidates must be under 15 years of age; "Ireland" Scholarships being limited to clergymen's sone: two "Author's Scholarships," of the value of £15 each, are given annually in June; also a Scholarship, worth £16 a year, confined to the sons of clergymen who have served for five years within the limits of the late East India Co.'s charters: there are three "Old Marlburian Exhibitions," one, "The Classical," vacant every three years, of the value of £50 yearly, tenable three "Old Mariburian Exhibitions," one, "The Classical," vacant every three years, of the value of £50 yearly, tenable for three years, and two "Modern," one adjudged annually, of the value of £25 a year each, tenable for two years; and also a considerable number of annual prizes. The number of pupils at present in the college is upwards of 570. A chapel was built in 1847 for the use of the students; it is a handsome building, and most of the windows are stained; the large east window, representing the "Te Deum," being remarkably handsome.

MELKSHAM.

MELKSHAM is a market, union and county court town, MELKSHAM is a market, union and county court town, polling-place for the Northern division of the county, station on the Wilts, Somerset and Weymouth railway, and parish, in the hundred of the same name, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Wilts and rural deanery of Potterne third portion, 100 miles from London, 30 north-west from Salisbury, 6 north-east from Bradford, 5 north-east from Trowbridge, 7 west from Devizes, 9½ from Westbury, 14 from Warminster, 12 east from Bath, 7 south from Chippenham and 5 south-south-east from Corsham. south-south-east from Corsham.

During the West Saxon era this was a place of considerable note; at the period of the Norman survey, and for several subsequent reigns it was held in Royal demesne, and gave name to an extensive forest. The town is situated on the main road from London through Devizes to Bath: it conthe main road from London through Devizes to Bath: it consists principally of one street nearly a mile in length, is well supplied with water by the Trowbridge Water Company: the houses are well-built, of soft freestone, but irregularly placed: the tewn is governed by a local board of twelve members. The river Avon passes through the town and is crossed by a handsome bridge of four arches, with light and elegant balustrades. The Wilts and Berks canal passes on the east of the town, and about 1½ miles southward joins the Kennet and Avon canal.

There are two mineral springs, one saline and the other chalybeate, in the vicinity, and in 1816 a new saline spa was obtained by boring to a depth of 351½ feet; it was anticipated that Melksham would advance into note in consequence of the medicinal qualities these waters possessed and every accommodation for visitors was provided, including a pumproom, hot and cold baths, a handsome crescent and an agreeable promenade; but after a very great outlay, the wells did not prove attractive and are now little used.

The church of St. Michael is a spacious structure of freestone, consisting of a Norman chancel, with some remains of Early English work, nave and aisles, with a handsome embattled tower surmounted by pinnacles and containing 6 bells: it was restored and enlarged in 1846, when the central tower was removed and a new tower built at the west end. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is vicarge, tithe-rent charge commuted at £920, with residence, in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, and held by the Rev. Francis Warre M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford, Prebendary of Salisbury.

A handsome chapel of ease, situated about 1 mile from the town, in the Early English style, has been built at the sole expense of the Rev.E.L.Barnwell, of Melksham House, and is licensed for the use of the district of Sandridge and Melksham Forest.

There are Baptist, Congregational, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels and a Meeting House for the Society of Friends.

The Town Hall and Cheese Market were erected in 1847 by a company of shareholders at an expense of £3,350; they form a spacious and well-arranged edifice of white freestone, in the Italian style.

The New Hall, Market place, built by Miss Fowler, is a handsome building of Bath stone, and is used for lectures and meetings.

The market is held on every alternate Tuesday in the month for cattle, sheep and pigs. A fair for cattle, sheep and horses is held in the Market place on the 27th of July.

Woollen manufactures, also the manufacture of flat and round rope, haircloths, cocos fibre and sacking are carried on here, and considerable business is done in malting.

Bruges' charity of about £20 yearly, half of which goes to Seend, is distributed in blankets by the vicar and churchwardens at Christmas. There are also two small charities, left by the Rev. Bohun Fox and Mr. Pritchard respectively, for the benefit of the poor, at the discretion of the vicar.

The principal landowners are Walter Hume Long esq. (who is lord of the manor), Lord Methuen, Ralph Ludlow Lopes esq. J.P., D.L. and Mrs. Ludlow Bruges.

The area of the civil parish, including Shaw and Whitley, is 12,572 acres; rateable value, £27,681; the population in the town in 1871 was 2,464, and in the parish of Melksham

BEANACRE, 1 mile south-west, and BLACKMORE, 1 mile south-east are tithings.

MERE is a market and union town and parish, in the Southern division of the county, Mere hundred, Hindon petty sessional division, county court district of Shaftesbury, Wylye rural deanery second portion, Salisbury archdeaconry and diocese, 23 miles west-by-north from Salisbury, 102 from Loudon, 7 west from Hindon, 7 east-by-north from Wincanton, 4 from Gillingham station on the South Western railway, situated on the borders of three counties—Wilts, Dorset and Somerset—which unite in the vicinity, and is on the road from Salisbury to Taunton Dean. The town is lighted with gas from works erected in 1866. The church of St. Michael the Archangel is a stone building, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles: the eastern part of the church is separated by a beautifully carved oak screen: in a Gothle niche over the porch, on the north store, is the figure of a saint, which appears to be of an earlier date than the church itself: the tower, with clock, playing the chimes, is at the west end; it is very stately and well built, square in form, turreted, 35 yards high, surmounted at the angles in form, turreted, 35 yards high, surmounted at the angles by four lofty pinnacles and containing 6 musical bells. The register dates from 1572, and the churchwardens' book, still preserved, dates from 1556. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £400, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Salisbury, and held by the Rev. Charles Henry Townsend M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. Here are chapels for the Primitive Methodists, the Society of Friends, also a Congregational chapel, a large and bandsome Gothic structure, erected at a cost of over £5,000, at the sole expense of Charles Jupe esq. built of local, Bath and Ham Hill stone. The charities amount to £169 yearly. In 1856 a cemetery was opened of about two acres: during the excavations necessary in its formation an earthen vessel was discovered, containing 400 Roman coins of very ancient date: two containing 400 Roman coins of very ancient date: two mortuary chapels have been erected. The market is on mortuary chapels have been erected. mortuary chapels have been erected. The market is on Tuesday; and annual fairs are held on the 17th of May and the 10th of October. In the Market place was formerly a market house of great antiquity; the same being in a dilapidated state it was found necessary to raze it; on the site was erected, in 1866, at the expense of H.R.H. the Duke of Cornwall, an illuminated clock tower. Silk throwing is carried on here, employing about 300 hands. Here is a literary institute and reading room and in 1850 a near ng is carried on here, employing about 300 hands. Here is a literary institute and reading room and in 1859 a penny bank was established. Mere constitutes a part of the Duchy of Cornwall: in the year 1253 permission was given to Richard, Earl of Cornwall, to build a castle on the hill, now known as Castle Hill, and afterwards to fortify it. The principal landowners are H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall, who is lord of the manor, Miss Grove, Meyrick Bankes esq. and Sir Henry A. Hoare bart. The soil is various, clay, chalk and flint: subsoil. chalk and soil is various, clay, chalk and finit; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, beans and oats, north; and on the south of the town (which is principally clay), fine grazing land. The Ashfield water rises from a chalk hill in the neighbourhood, and after turning several mills it joins the river Stour. The parish contains 7,308 acres; rateable value, £13,576; and the population in 1871 was 1,382, exclusive of the tithings, and in the whole parish, 3,161.

Parish Clerk, Frederick Cross.

CHADDENWICKE is a tithing, with 29 inhabitants, 1½ miles north-east; WOODLANDS, a tithing, 1 mile south, with 1,197; Bush Hayes, 1½ south-east, Manor House, Barrow Street, 1 south-east, and Burton, half a mile east, are adjusted places. are adjacent places.

SALISBURY,

WITH FISHERTON ANGER, BAST HARNHAM AND MILFORD.

THE city of Salisbury, or New Sarum, is a polling place | both to health and cleanliness; but these canals, as they were court district, in the union of Alderbury, Wilton rural deanery, Salisbury archdeaconry and diocese, 82 miles from London, or 83 miles by railway through Basingstoke and 95 through Bishopstoke, on the old road to Exeter, from which city it is 93 miles north-east, 23 south from Devizes, 27 from Marlborough, 141 from Romsey and 281 west from Winchester. The city is built in the valley at the junction for the Southern division of the county, the head of a county locally termed, are now filled up and stopped. The extensive sewage and other sanitary improvements of the Board of Health have effectively drained every part of the city. Extensive waterworks have been constructed on the northeast side of the city, at a cost of about £14,000, under the direction of the Board of Health, for the purpose of insuring a plentiful supply of water, which, according to recent analysis, is considered of very pure quality, and is raised by an engine of four rivers—The Avon, Wiley, Nadder and Bourne—and from a well to a height of about 100 feet into a covered the soil is extremely fertile. The Avon formerly sent off reservoir at Bishopedown Hill, distant about a quarter of a -mall clear streams through most of the streets, contributing | mile. In the centre of the city is a market place, a spacious and handsome square, surrounded by good shops. The streets intersect each other at right angles, forming a series of quadrangles, called the Chequers, each faced outwardly with houses, and the interior laid out in courts and gardens.

The city was first incorporated by Henry III., but its charter was confirmed and extended by Queen Anne. The municipal borough comprises the following parishes:—St. Edmund (Salisbury), part of St. Martin (Salisbury), St. Thomas (Salisbury), part of Fisherton Anger parish, part of Milford tything, and the liberty of the close of the Canons of the Cathedral. Under the Municipal Act the city is divided into 5 wards, and the council consists of 24 members. The parliamentary borough comprises in addition another portion of Fisherton Anger parish, added by the Boundary Act, 1868; it returns two members to Parliament.

The South Western railway from Basingstoke to Exeter passes through Salisbury, and connects it with London, while a branch from Bishopstoke gives communication with Southampton; and there is a line from the city to a junction near Ringwood, on the Southampton and Dorchester line, which places it in connection with Christchurch and Bournemouth. The Great Western has a station here on the Salisbury and Warminster branch, connecting the city with the coal fields of Somersetshire, and with Bath and Rrittol

North of the city is a desolate mound, arising abruptly from the valley on the west, and its eastern side connected with a ridge of the Downs: its deep fosses and stupendous earthen ramparts, nearly a mile in circumference, mark the site of OLD SARUM, now called Old Castle, or Castle Hill. The name is said to mean, in British, a dry situation. There is reason for believing it to have been a stronghold of the Belgse, who inhabited the western counties of Hants, Wilts, and Somerset; and that it was a station of the Romans is indicated by coins of various emperors found within its area, and by three Roman roads, of which it was the nucleus, from Winchester, Silchester and Dorchester, with other three, partly traceable to Bath, Ilchester, and a station on the Kennet. Under the West Saxons, it first became a Christian see. King Stephen placed a garrison here, which offended the Churchmen, who, immured upon a steep and arid hill, had probably already cast many a longing glance at the fertile and irrigated meads at its foot. A new cathedral was projected; the proud fane of Salisbury arose; and, deprived of its splendid ecclesiastical establishment, this once important and flourishing city vanished as a dream: a few fragments of foundations alone remain of all its buildings. The elevation of the inner mound is calculated to be 339 feet; within it stood the citadel, with some streets radiating from and others encircling it. In the hot summer of 1834, the extreme drought so broke up the ground between the entrenchments as to discover the entire foundations of the ancient cathedral, situated as was supposed on the northwest side. A very large and curious double key was found among its ruins.

A tree near Stratford was the place of nominal election for the borough of Old Sarum, but almost immediately after the Reform Act, a violent wind blew down the principal part of the tree: several large arms of it were broken down, and carried as trophics by the exulting populace, when the passing of the Reform Act disfranchised this borough.

Edward III. assembled a parliament here at which Mortimer, Earl of March and his partisans attended with their armed followers. The Earls of Kent, Norfolk and Lancaster, being summoned by Mortimer to attend this parliament without an armed force, on discovering Mortimer's position, retreated to assemble their retainers and return with an army; the quarrel, however, was compromised through the intervention of the clergy. In the reign of Richard III. the Duke of Buckingham was beheaded here; his headless remains were discovered some years ago beneath the floor of the kitchen of the 'Saracen's Head' inn.

High street lies in a direct line between the old and new cities, and its continuation is called Castle street, as Old Sarum is denominated Castle Hill. The Bath road turns off from High street by a stone bridge over the Avon through the suburb of FISHERTON ANGRE.

The Cathedral is the most conspicuous object and is justly the pride of Wiltshire: it is the finest specimen of the First Pointed or Early English style of architecture in this country: it was commenced in 1220 and finished in 1258, except the spire, which was not carried to its extreme height till 1274: lightness, simplicity and harmony of design characterise all its parts: the subdued lights of the interior and its long perspective of delicate clustered pillars, tall pointed arches and lofty groined roof awaken sensations of admiration: the eastern windows are stained, the lower representing the Resurrection, over which is the Raising of the Brazen Serpent: the Cathedral is in the form of a double or Greek cross, and consists of choir, nave, with aisles, a lady chapel at the eastern end, a greater and lesser transept, a central tower with spire, a muniment room or vestry, and cloisters and chapter house: the western front and buttresses all round are adorned with canopied niches for statues : a few only, however, of their stone occupants have survived the devastations of time and fanaticism, but latterly many statues have been inserted in place of those lost: the tower springs from the intersection of the choir and nave with the principal transept, and the spire from the parapet of the tower, four of the sides resting on arched buttresses from its angles; the spire is the highest in England, rising 404 feet from the pavement—a height which exceeds by 30 feet that of the dome and cross of St. Paul's: the spectator is filled with astonishment on contemplating the slender piers and pointed arches, 80 feet high, which support so prodigious a superincumbent mass; yet such is the strength of the architecture, by means of arches and counter arches within and without, that although, by an original settlement of the foundations, the spire declined 23 inches from the perpendicular towards the south-west, the most accurate observations, during two centuries, have never detected any increase of declination: this beautiful structure has been twice damaged by lightning: in 1668, Sir Christopher Wren, being called in for its repair, at once comprehended its wonderful combination of lightness with solidity, and he afterwards built the very fine tower of St. Mary's church, at Warwick, on the model of this: in 1741 the tower was actually in flames, and the whole fabric narrowly escaped destruction: the last repairs, carried on by means of a curious wicker contrivance, suspended from the top for the security of the workmen, were completed in 1827: the interior of the Cathedral has been cleaned of the whitewash and colouring, and under it, on the choir ceiling, was found a beautiful arrangement of paintings of our Saviour and his Apostles &c. which have been faithfully copied and restored: the pillars throughout were found much decayed and had to be repaired with new marble and re-polished: the floor of the Lady Chapel is laid with encaustic tiles and marble: the choir, the 13th century choir stalls, and Bishop's throne, have been restored by the laity and clergy in memory of the late Bishop Hamilton, and it is also intended to erect a monument to his memory in the south areade within the communion rails. The Bishop's throne and priests' stalls are exquisite specimens of Gothic carving in oak. The organ, which was the gift of King George III. has been taken out and replaced by a new one, the gift of Miss Chafyn Grove, of Zeales, which cost £3,500 (without blowing machinery and case), and consists of four manuals of 55 sounding stops and 8 copula stops each; it is placed in the second arcade on each side of the choir, and connected by a tunnel, the bellows (blown by a noiseless gas engine) being in the north transept. The Cathedral contains two large tombs in choir to Bishops Bingham and William, of York, and memorials of the following Bishops of Salisbury, viz.: a slab with recumbent effigy in low relief of Roger, who died 1139; marble effigy of Richard le Poore.

Bishop of Salisbury and Durham successively, who built this Cathedral and the "nine altars" at Durham, ob. 1237; marble mural monument to John Davenant, ob. 1641; and tomb with marble bust of Seth Ward, one of the founders of the Royal Society, ob. 1689: in addition is a marble monument, with effigies of Edward Seymour, Earl of Hertford, son of Protector Duke of Somerset, and his side I fait Cathedral for warring whom he was wife, Lady Catherine Gray, for marrying whom he was committed to the Tower—he died 1621; a monument, with marble statue of Hibernia, to Thomas Lord Wyndham, Chancellor and Lord Justice of Ireland, ob. 1745; an altar tomb of wood, coloured and gilt, with marble recumbent effigy of William Longespée, Earl of Salisbury, ob. 1226; mural tablet, with bust of Chief Justice Sir Robert Hyde, ob. 1665; and tombs, with efficies of Sir John Montacute. present at Crecy, ob. 1889, and Sir John Chemery, standard-bearer to the Earl of Richmond at Bosworth, who died 1509. Between two of the northern columns of the nave is between two of the northern columns of the nave is a monument, the top of which is an incised slab formerly bearing a brass, the form of which shows a small figure episcopally vested, as especially shown by the mitred head: no vestige of the inscription remains, and as it is well known that Bishops had no such miniature effigies placed on their tombs, and that if a chorister died during the time in which have a casting the naxt of "Ban Bishop" that is on which he was enacting the part of "Boy Bishop," that is, between Christmas and Epiphany, he was buried with all the dignity of Episcopai rank, it has been conjectured, and most likely with good reason, that this is the tomb of a "Boy Bishop."

A new metal screen partly the gift of Mrs. Sidney Lear has been put in place of the old stone one; it is of very beautiful design, in harmony with the building, enriched with beautiful scroll work and surmounted by a cross of considerable size, inlaid with filagree and other ornaments.

The reredos is an exquisite piece of work in Early English style, erected by Earl Beauchamp in memory of his ancestor Bishop Beauchamp, ob. 1482.

An old house in Pennyfarthing street is still pointed out as being originally the offices where the men were paid who were engaged in building the cathedral; and the street is said to have derived its name from the men there striking for an advance of pay-viz. from one penny to one penny farthing per day.

Adjoining the south-west side of the cathedral is the cloister, now used as a cemetery for the Close, a quadrangle of 180 feet, enclosed by a beautiful areade, corresponding in style with the church, and communicating with the very elegant with the church, and communicating with the very elegant chapter-house, which is an octangular room, ornamented with some very curious sculptures and covered with a vaulted roof, the ramified ribs of which spring from a clustered pillar in the centre; it has been judiclously restored: the fine effect of the cathedral is greatly enhanced by its standing embosomed in lofty and venerable trees, and quite unencumbered by buildings, in the midst of its noble Close, which resembles a spacious meadow, and is environed by houses, which detached, and in many instances picturesque, which chiefly detached, and in many instances picturesque, which are the residences of its clergy, officers and others. The churchyard, or lawn of the Close, was a place of burial till Bishop Barrington removed to the cloisters all the remains interred here. A broad gravelled and shaded mall, which forms the approach to the great western entrance of the cathedral, and crosses the Close from north to south, is the favourite summer evening promenade. The Close has three gates: that at the south end communicates with Harnham and the contiguous country; that at the north end with High street and the body of the city; and that at the east, with St. Ann street and the road to Southampton: adjoining with St. Ann street and the road to countainpoin. Sometime north gate is the Matrons' college, founded by Bishop Ward for ten ladies, widows of clergymen of the diocese. The south quarter of the Close is occupied by the Bishop's palace and gardens, dividing the city from the more ancient village

In addition to the cathedral, Salisbury contains three parish churches. St. Martin's, situated in the highest part of the town, on its south-eastern confines, and considered the most ancient in the city, is a stone edifice with square tower containing 6 bells, surmounted by a spire: it has a chancel, nave and aisles: the east window is stained in vivid mosaic: in the chancel are four other stained windows, and one in the south aisle: on the north side of the chancel is a handsome monument of the Swarpe family, and a brass. one in the south asset: on the north side of the chancel is a handsome monument of the Swayne family, and a brass, dated 1692: the church was repaired and re-seated with open benches in 1850; the sittings are all free. The register dates from 1559, and is written in Latin up to 1620. The living is a rectory, yearly value £188, in the gift of Mrs. King Wyndham and held by the Rev. Calcraft Neeld Wyld, of the Theological College, Salisbury.

St. Edmund's church stands on the north-east extremity of the city, in an extensive churchyard planted with line trees, and is a handsome edifice of the fliteenth century: it has raised chancel, nave, aisles and transept, with square embattled tower, having pinnacles at each corner, and containing 6 bella, and was restored from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott, at a cost of more than £7,000: the chancel has been rebuilt, and the aisles lengthened, and the east window is stained: the seats are all free and unappropriated. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishop and held by the Rev. George James Cowley-Brown M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford.

St. Thomas', which was erected as a chapel of ease to the cathedral in 1240, is a large handsome structure, with square tower having 8 bells and a set of chimes: it has a chancel and chancel aisles, nave, and aisles: the roof is of oak, handsomely carved and panelled: the old organ (the present of George III.) taken out of the cathedral has been placed here: the stained chancel window represents Our Saviour Blessing the Eleven Apostles, all full-length figures, and finely executed: in the south aisle are two singular monuments, each representing two kneeling figures, erected to the memory of Charles Eyre esq. founder of an hospital in this city: under the tower entrance is a rough carving of in this city: under the tower entrance is a rough carving of oak, representing a series of subjects in the lives of the Patriarchs, inscribed with the ardst's name, and the addition, "his own work:" which has given rise to a proverbid joke in the city of calling any performance at which it author is unreasonably elated, "Humphrey Beckham's own work:" the chancel of this church has been restored under the direction of R. Start on h. The most that determined the contraction of the series of the chancel of the series of the the direction of G. E. Street esq. R.A. The register dates from the year 1570. The living is a vicarsge, yearly rales £118, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter and held by the Rev. William David Morrice M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge and rural dean of Wilton; this church is in a central position between the High street and Market place, and adjoins a small square at the south-west corner of the latter, used as a poultry market, and enclosing a beautiful Gothic hexagonal stone cross of the age of Edward III. which was thoroughly restored about 1854.

The handsome Catholic church in Exeter street was built in 1851, from a design by the late Mr. Pugin: near the church are the schools, conducted by the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul

The Congregational church in Fisherton street was opened June 11, 1879, having been erected at a cost of upwards of £7,000: it is in the Early Decorated Gothic style, and consits of nave, aisles and apse (with organ chamber and vestry on either side of the apse), and tower and spire rising to a height of 132 feet. There are also places of worship for Baptists and Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists.

There are two cemeteries, one of 8 acres, about three-quarters of a mile north-east of the town, on the London road; and the other of 23 acres, about the same distance north-west, on the Devizes road: each has two mortners chapels in them.

A religious house, adjoining the church of St. Edmund, was founded here in the 13th century by Bishop de la Wyle, and dedicated to St. Edmund: it was under the Wyle, and dedicated to St. Edmund: it was under the charge of a provost and 12 canons; the church of St. Edmund was founded at the same time, and formed the collegiste church; during three centuries, this college having been seized by the crown, had been devoted to secular purposes, but in 1873 it was purchased from the then possessors by the Rev. George Hugh Bourne D.C.L. of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and by him converted into a place of religious education, retaining the old name of St. Edmund's College; the Rev. G. H. Bourne is warden of the college. the Rev. G. H. Bourne is warden of the college, which was originally established at Chardstock in Dorset; a number of antique military weapons and accourtements have been duy up in its ground, supposed to be memorials of the great battle of Old Sarum, fought between the Saxons and Britoss in 552.

Near the London road are situated the buildings of the Salisbury school, which was founded in 1876, to pre-vide for the increasing need of high class education in the city and neighbourhood: its numbers rose from 4 or 5 pupils to its present list of over 40, so that fresh accommodation to its present list of over 40, so that fresh accommodation had to be provided in the spring of 1879; the new school buildings are well planned and can be easily enlarged; the site is healthy and open, and a good cricket field of 6 acres forms part of the grounds; the buildings are of red brick; the design, though simple, is very effective, and the interior fittings are planned with equal simplicity and artistic taste. About £500 from various charities is distributed in money and kind.

The Council House, a handsome building of white brick, with stone portice, erected at the sole expense of the late Earl of Rador, is advantageously placed at the south-east angle of the Market place: it contains on one spacious floor the two county courts, a council-room for the Corporation, 75 feet long, and retiring rooms for the judges, officers and winesses, waiting-rooms for witnesses and other convenient apartments; in front of the Council House, on a pedestal of granite, is a bronze statue of the late Lord Herbert of Lea, by Baron Marochetti.

The Lent assize in March has been transferred for greater convenience to Devizes, but the Summer assize is held here.

A handsome and commodious Corn Exchange has been erected at the north-west corner of the Market place, connected by means of a branch railway with the stations at Pisherton. The great corn market is on Tuesday, and the cattle market every other Tuesday. An old fair for sheep was re-established about 1853.

Fairs are held on the Monday before the 5th of April and the 22nd of October. A very large sheep and cattle fair is held at the village of Britford, about 1½ miles from Salisbury, in the Ringwood road, on the 12th of August. Formerly a large pleasure fair was held on Whit Monday and Tuesday, in the square and churchyard of the cathedral close; but the Dean and Chapter, who received the tolls under an old charter, have caused it to be discontinued.

The trade is limited to the necessary supply of the city and of the numerous villages around, whose inhabitants frequent the markets every Saturday. The manufacture of woollen goods has entirely disappeared, that of hardware and ornamental cuttery of a very superior description, particularly scissors, is still continued to a small extent.

This city is provided with subscription libraries; a literary and scientific institution has also been established. The Hamilton Hall was built in 1871 for a literary and scientific institution and is a fine building of brick, with stone dressings, situate in New street, and contains class rooms for the use of the School of Art and a spacious lecture room. Concerts and assemblies are well supported; and races are held on the Downs, beyond Harnham hill, for two days in August.

The Salisbury and South Wilts Museum, in St. Ann's street, is open to the public (gratis) daily, viz.: except Friday and Sunday, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. during the months of May, June, July, August and September; from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and on Monday, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in addition, during the other months of the year: it contains local objects of art and antiquity, and geological and other collections; among the local contents is the Giant and attendant Hob nob or Hobby horse, which were important features in guild processions in this city, and are the only specimens remaining in the country.

The Blackmore Museum, St. Ann's street, was founded by the late Mr. William Blackmore in 1864, and on his decease was vested in the governing body of the Salisbury and South Wilts Museum to be in their charge so long as they can find funds for its support—it may be seen on the same days, at the same hours and under the same conditions as the other museum; the collection is ethnological, and contains an important series of flint implements, both English and foreign; the collection of stone pipes is very curious: the object of the founder was to make the collection illustrative of the different phases of the "stone age" in various countries, with examples of the primitive use of copper, bronze and iron.

There are four newspapers published in the city.

Close under the bridge over the Avon, in a pretty but low situation, stands the Hospital of St. Nicholas, said to have seen built in 1220, by Countess Ela, wife of sixth Earl of Salisbury, son of Henry the Second, by Fair Rosamond, for ix aged men and as many women, with a small chapel ttached. There have also been erected, near to Fisherton burch, three dwelling-houses (now increased to six), called t. Paul's Home, founded and endowed by the late Francis ttwood esq. of the Close, for widows or sisters of clergy-sen of the diocese, with annuity to each of £30, provisioning made for payment of rates and taxes and for a gardener keep the grounds: the structure, both in appearance and aterial, is handsome. The city contains a great number of ylums for the aged and infirm and charitable institutions reducational purposes, besides a Grammar school and a hool for preparing indigent girls of the respectable classes resuperior service; there is in the Close a normal training for female teachers, under the management of the shop and clergy of the diocese; there is also in the Close a college for theological students, founded by the late Bishop . Hamilton.

The rateable value of St. Edmund's parish is £11,019; of St. Martin's, £5,102; of St. Thomas, £11,324; of the Close, £3,785; of Fisherton Anger, £16,472; and of Milford tithing, £7,535.

The population of the parliamentary and municipal city in 1861 was 19,278 and in 1871 was:—

Old Sarum, or Old Castle, has a population of 12.

FISHERTON ANGER is a parish, and was a village much more ancient than the city of Salisbury, of which it now forms a populous suburb, on the west side of the river Avon, a stone bridge connecting the two places: part of it is within the municipal and parliamentary borough of Salisbury and another part within the parliamentary borough of Wilton, and is in the hundred of Branch and Dole and the union of Alderbury. In this parish are the stations of the South Western and Great Western railways close together, the former retaining its old station at Milford, on the south-east side of the city, for the goods department. The old church of St. Clement has been pulled down and St. Paul's arected in 1852, in the Early English style, on a site near the railway stations: it is of stone and cut fiint and has chancel, nave, aisles and a square tower containing a clock and 6 bells, surmounted by a low spire: the north saile was added in 1876. The register dates from the year 1652. The living is a rectory, yearly value £350, with residence and about 7 acres of glebe land, in the gift of trustees and held by the Rev. Edgar Nembhard Thwaites. Here is the Fisherton Lunatic Asylum, the largest private asylum in England and capable of holding 672 patients; Drs. Finch and Lush are the proprietors. Here is the capacious and admirably-conducted Infirmary, built 1766, by voluntary contribution and incorporated by Royal Charter, 1862: it has a convalescent home in connection with it at Bournemouth. Hayter's charity of £400 yearly is for 8 poor women, who receive 8s. each weekly. Nowe's charity, at Romsey, in Hampshire, provides for the education, at the Fisherton National school, of 5 boys whose parents belong to the Church of England; at the age of 15 they are apprended at the cost of the charity, at Romsey, in Hampshire, provides for the education, at the Fisherton National school, of 5 boys whose parents belong to the Church of England; at the age of 15 they are apprended at the cost of the first, the completion of the education of MILFORD is a tithing, in the parish of St. Martin, adjoining to, and a portion of it forming part of, the city and borough of Salisbury on the east, in the hundred of Underditch and union of Alderbury: the village or hamlet of MILFORD is about half a mile further east. The Bishop of Salisbury is lord of the manor. The area is 1,274 acres; rateable value, i£7,535; and the population in 1871 was 873.

EAST HARNHAM is a suburban village and ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1855 out of the civil parish of Britford, on the south bank of the Avon, connected with Salisbury by a stone bridge of 10 arches, built by Bishop Bingham in the year 1244, over which the Exeter road is carried. The church of All Saints is in the Decorated style, and was built in 1854 of stone and cut flint, with Bath stone dressings: it has chancel, nave, organ and vestry chamber on the north and a handsome porch on the south, with stone gable beliry at the west end: there is a stained east window and two other stained windows in the nave. The register dates from the year 1854. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £105, in the gift of the vicar of Britford and held by the Rev. Charles David Crawley M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. It contained in 1871 a population of 505.
